Tips, Rules, Advice and Suggestions for a Safari to the Hamptons

By Dan Rattiner

Next week, my girl friend and I are going on our annual winter vacation. It's a bit late in the winter for the vacation, but we had to wait until now because the natives are not at their most abundant until the delta floods and that doesn't happen until the rainy season ends in late March. We are going on safari to Africa and the natives are the wild animals.

I have been thinking philosophically about this trip. My main piece of philosophy involves wondering how to keep myself from being eaten. One person who has come back alive and who has been to the Okavango Delta in Botswana, which is where we are going, told me that the native creatures in wherever-that-is are used to people. You ignore them, they ignore you.

In other words, it's just like here.

And so, what I thought to do, today, was pass along to you all the advice I have gotten about this upcoming trip, but transposed. You're in New York City. And somebody is giving you advice about coming out to the Hamptons.

Bring with you suntan lotion, cameras, bathing suits, mosquito repellant and sunglasses.

Bring money.

Since the natives are endangered, it is against the law to shoot any of them, bring any of them out of the country, or any part of them out of the country, such as their tusks or pelts.

A week before you are scheduled to come, begin taking the malaria medicine. Take it the whole time you are there, and then for four weeks after you get back. You still might get malaria.

You don't need to take any special shots before you go, unless you are going to Amagansett, in which case you'll need shots for Bonacker Plague. But if you're only going there for a day or two, it is not necessary.

> Do not touch; pat or stroke any of the natives. They could take it the wrong way. Especially in Amagansett.

The total amount of luggage you should carry is 25 pounds. If you bring more, you might have to pay for a second seat on the Jitney.

Bring one change of clothes. You'll be washing the dirty clothes in a sink and setting them out to dry every night.

You'll be taken out on a safari twice a day in a Range Rover to observe the natives. Hopefully you'll see something endangered. (A plumber, for example.) The first trip every day will leave at 5 a.m. and get back at 8 a.m., the second will leave at 5 p.m. and get back at 8 p.m. It is at these times that the native creatures have generally finished with their eating of one another, have napped and are up and about.

Some of the local hotels and camps have electricity at night as well as in the daytime.

Do not touch, pat or stroke any of the natives. They could take it the wrong way. Especially in Amagansett.

It is a mistake to think that natives let their hair or their guard down when they are at the watering hole (such as Nick & Toni's).

Do not get out of the Range Rover for any purpose whatsoever unless told by the driver or guide to do so. Not even for Starbucks.

Do not leave the grounds of where you are staying at night without an armed guard. Especially in Amagansett.

The natives are used to visitors and, though not friendly, will ignore you as they go about

If a native (for example an electrician) makes eye contact with you, look away. It's best to look at the ground.

If a native charges at you, run away and hide behind something. Or return and get into the Range Rover. Or climb a tree, if what is chasing you is not a tree-climbing creature. (Such as an electrician.)

The natives think of Range Rovers as predators and are afraid of them. And quite rightly.

Access Road to the Beach is Blocked by Boulders. Legal Battle Looms

By Dan Rattiner

Six years ago, a New Jersey man built a beachfront home on Surfside Drive in Bridgehampton. It was the end lot, right where this road dead ends. And when he got this house done, he moved into it and instructed workmen to put a large steel barrier across the narrow sand road that goes out to the beach just beyond his property. At one point, the sand road crossed his property. He'd put a stop to that.

In New Jersey, a man might get away with blocking an access to the beach. In New York, it is a different story. In colonial times, the King of England issued something called the Dongan Patent of 1688 that decreed all the beaches in the state belong to the people. No one could prevent the people of the state from their rights to their use of it or their access to it. The Dongan Patent has stood the test of time. And it is in effect today.

This particular beach access road is down at the end of a small lane and is used only rarely, by fishermen and clammers. It has also been used on occasion when the Town has had to bring emergency vehicles out onto the beach to save lives or work on the Sagg Pond cut. It is one of only nineteen beach access roads in the town.

Under the circumstances, the barrier didn't stay up long. A fisherman reported the blocked road to the police. And the police brought the matter to the attention of the fire department, ambulance corps and town board. It was quickly found that this man, Robert Simpson, had put up this barrier. Mr. Simpson was telephoned courteously, at first, by the Town Supervisor at the time, Vince Cannuscio, who asked him to remove it, and when he refused, Mr. Cannuscio ordered the town Highway Department go in and rip the thing out, which they did the very next day. And that, everybody thought, was the end of it.

> Mr. Cannuscio ordered the Highway Department go in and rip the thing out, which they did the very next day. Everybody thought that was the end of it.

Mr. Simpson, however, is not someone who accepts defeat easily. He stewed on what had happened for a while, and then he began dispatching lawyers to look into the deed that had caused the purchase to his property, the deed for the property over which the sand road runs and the restrictions that had been put in place when the road he had built his house on had been formed as a subdivision. The lawyers worked for six years. And they found something.

Last week, the barriers were back. Not only that. Mr. Simpson had a piece of paper enjoining the Town from removing the barriers. Remove them and you were in violation of the law. So said an injunction signed by State Justice John J. J. Jones, of the New York State Supreme Court.

The Town has been sent reeling as a result of this behavior, not only because of the suddenness and the audacity of it, but because of its utter insensitivity. There is also something utterly obsessive about a man spending six years in this way. Apparently, sitting in his big glass house with the vast ocean views, he has been outraged by the appearance of every fisherman's jeep that has come by. Obviously, this is not how things are done in New Jersey. No matter how long it took, he was going to put a stop to it.

As a result of this, for the moment anyway, the Town has settled back to take a long hard look at this matter. One doesn't disobey a judge's injunction. Better look at how best to counter this measure, in what manner and in what court. It has gotten complicated, because the injunction was gotten on very narrow grounds involving a long ago deed restriction placed on the subdivision. The judge's ruling is in a State Court. It overrules County and Town courts. But it does not overrule Federal courts. The gauntlet has been thrown. And it will undoubtedly be picked up. This decision cannot be allowed to stand.

What the lawyers found and presented to Judge Jones was this. Mr. Simpson's home was built on property that was in a subdivision called Surfside. When Surfside was created down here by the beach in the 1960s, there was a restrictive clause put on it, which said that access onto the roads of the subdivision would be restricted to residents of the subdivision. The roads were, and are, Meadowlark Lane, Sandpiper Lane and Surfside Drive. Mr. Simpson's argument, brought before Judge Jones, was that since only residents of the subdivision may use these roads, the sand road at the end of Surfside Drive is now off-limits to the public. Simply on the face of it, and that is all that the Judge was asked to consider, the ruling is correct. But there are many other ramifications that remain to be considered.

For example, there is the fact that this sand road has been in use, and protected by the Federal Laws since 1688. (The Southampton Town Trustees — a separate body from the Town Board — was established in Colonial times to protect these rights of way and will undoubtedly step in here.) And there is the matter of whether a restriction such as this — this is not a gated community — can be considered to have remained in effect since the 1960s since it has never been enforced.

A much more interesting consideration is the fact that the property to which this sand road goes is owned by the Town of Southampton. Turns out that the Simpson parcel is not exactly at the end of Surfside Drive. There was, originally, one more farther on. This last parcel, perhaps the most valuable of all the building sites in the development, was seized in 1977 by Suffolk County for non-payment of taxes. Believe it or not, nobody wanted it.

Eventually, as these things happen when property is seized, it got bought up by somebody, with the villages, towns and state given first choice. The Town of Southampton bought it. And it is the Town of Southampton — all the people in the town — that own this parcel today. The townspeople have every right to go to this lot. It's theirs. All they have to do is take the sand road out to it. From this perspective, are not all the people of Southampton residents in common on Surfside Drive? Isn't that what publicly owned land is? I guess the courts will decide all this.

How long this will take and what it will cost just to stop a few beach buggies from coming alongside his house, might be of interest to Mr. Simpson. There is a precedent for it.

Way up in the woods in East Hampton, there is the remains of a small village. These remains — in the form of foundations and

Is Your Life a Book? A Documentary? A Poem? A Musical?

By Dan Rattiner

We've all had bad times in our lives. Imagine yours. Now imagine the very worst of your bad times. And then consider this: what if years and years later somebody made a very public display out of it. Even wrote a book about it. And then, amazingly, someone created a Broadway show out of it? So my question is, would you go? No? What if they made it into a Broadway MUSICAL? Would you go to THAT?

The answer to that question for family and friends of the Bouviers of East Hampton — First Lady Jackie Kennedy Onassis was a Bouvier and grew up here — was answered last week when the show GREY GARDENS opened in Manhattan just off Broadway.

Jackie's sister, Princess Lee Radziwill, a longtime resident of East Hampton, came. So did editor Ben Bradlee and writer Sally Quinn, who bought the East Hampton mansion "Grey Gardens" from the Beales in the end. The character playing Ms. Radziwill as a sixteen-year-old debutante appeared in the first act. Some comments are made about finding a proper match for her from among the upper class families summering that year in the Hamptons. At that point, in the audience, Ms. Radziwill left. Bradlee and Quinn, however, stayed. And they remained on through the entire evening.

The bad thing that happened to the Bouvier family, and which was happening on the stage, occurred in the summer of 1977. In a filthy, falling down summer mansion in East Hampton there was Edith Beale, a grand dame (born Bouvier), now 75 years old, whose husband had left her. And there was her unmarried daughter, Little Edie, now in her fifties, who had years before almost gotten married to Joe Kennedy, Jr., but it fell through. These two, with the money long since run out, were still living in the tattered remains of their summer mansion, but now with rats, birds, piles of garbage and over 50 cats and cat droppings. The house had not been properly cleaned in twenty years. But

SUNY SOUTHAMPTON COLLEGE HOSPITAL?

By Dan Rattiner

Stony Brook University is in the process of buying the Southampton College campus. At $35 million, it's a huge purchase from the perspective of the East End, but from Stony Brook's perspective, it's just another day in the life. The annual budget of Stony Brook University is about half a billion dollars. Buying the college is just one more thing, though an important thing, to do.

If you drive around Stony Brook University, it's not hard to notice that a major component of it, second perhaps in size and importance only to the Undergraduate facility, is its vast medical school and hospital. Stony Brook University Hospital is considered the best hospital on Long Island and probably the equal of the best hospitals in the City of New York. If you get sick here in the Hamptons and it's complicated or life threatening, where you will go if you do not go to New York City is to the University Hospital at Stony Brook University.

Interestingly, our local Southampton Hospital, just a few miles down the road from the now vacant Southampton College Campus, is going through some hard times just now. It's always been a good regional hospital, but about ten years ago, due to the overexuberance of a President named John Ferry, it managed to spend its way through its $15 million endowment and get itself $40 million in debt. That debt, now formalized as a bond, hangs heavy over the head of this hospital. And in recent years, the hospital has reached out to form some sort of financial arrangement with big city hospitals, most notably Mt. Sinai and NY Presbyterian. But nothing of any substance has come of any of it.

It is fair to say that the initial interest Stony Brook University had in the Southampton Campus was that this campus is all built and they liked it. And would not accept any help.

As it happened, one day a man delivering groceries from the local market called police to tell them it was his opinion that this house was unfit for human habitation. The police called the County Board of Health and the County Board of Health threatened to file papers to have the Beales evicted if they didn't clean the place up. Or maybe not. It was a delicate business, evicting people for living in squalor, particularly relatives of Jackie Kennedy. On the other hand, the Beales seemed not to care very much what happened. Oblivious to the outside world, they were gripped day to day in the power of a love-hate mother-daughter relationship. Mr. Beale had been such a bastard, running out on Big Edie like that. But maybe he would come back. And Little Edie, according to Big Edie, had been so filled with the promise of a glamorous future and now she was such a disappointment, wasn't she?

The story of the attempted eviction of the Beales was a news item, and it appeared in many weeklies at the time, including this one. And so it came to the attention of two documentary filmmakers, David and Albert Maysles, who had made a mark for themselves earlier by filming the Altamont Rock Concert in California at the height of the hippie movement. They spent a few weeks in East Hampton trying to meet the Beales. And they finally did. Little Edie was enthusiastic about them doing a film of them in their house. Perhaps it would make her a movie star. Big Edie consented reluctantly. She really thought it was stupid. But it made her daughter happy.

And so this film — not a book or the later Broadway show — was made, and it became a big hit, and then, since this was thirty years ago after all, it kind of faded into the woodwork as a cult film. People would trot it out once in a while. It has been shown several times at the Dan's Papers They Made the Movie Here Film Festival. On several occasions, we held Q and A sessions after the showing with people who were there at the time and knew the Beales.

And then, last year, 29 years after all this happened, this newspaper learned that several Broadway types were going to make a musical called GREY GARDENS based on the events in East Hampton all those years before. A musical? How do you make a musical out of that? It seemed impossible.

Well, they did. And it has opened and it is a smash hit.

"Christine Ebersole easily matches the achievements of this year's newly anointed Oscar winners Philip Seymour Hoffman (who played Truman Capote in Capote) and Reese Witherspoon (June Carter Cash in Walk the Line)," crowed reviewer Ben Brantley in the New York Times the morning after opening night.

How could this be?

It could be because those putting this show together had assembled some of the most creative minds in the business. Pulitzer Prize winning author Doug Wright was put to work writing the book. Scott Frankel wrote the songs. Legendary costume designer William Ivey Long designed the clothes, Allen Moyer designed the sets, which cost in the six figures — there's a lot of garbage — and the whole thing is directed by Michael Greif. In the cast is five time Tony nominee John McMartin, who has two roles: Major Bouvier (Edie's father) and, for some reason, the evangelist Norman Vincent Peale, a cameo appearance.

The success of the project seems to have been decided early on by setting the first act in the house in 1940. The house glitters in the sunshine. Little Edie is 15. And Big Edie is dressed in the latest fashion. Hopes are high. Then the curtain comes down for intermission and goes up again on the same scene in 1976. What a mess. And Big Edie is sick in bed with her pills at 75. As for Little Edie, she is now the same age as her mother was in the first act, and she is now being played by the same actress, Christine Ebersole, who played Big Edie in Act One. Voila. A tour de force.

The house "Grey Gardens" was sold by Little Edie Beale upon the death of her mother in 1979. Ben Bradlee and Sally Flynn, who bought it, gave Little Edie a choice of two prices. Either broom clean or As Is. She chose As Is and moved to Florida. Little Edie died in 2002 at the age of 86.

GREY GARDENS the Broadway show is in performance at the Playwrights Horizons Theatre in Manhattan for a limited run. Call 212-279-4200 for tickets.

"Grey Gardens" the film by the Brothers Maysles, is available on DVD at barnesandnoble.com for about $22 anytime. Enjoy. •

In Praise of Dictators

Caesar, Cleopatra, Ataturk, Mubarak, Abdullah bin Abdul Aziz

By Dan Rattiner

Nineteen terrorists killed 2600 Americans when they commandeered four airplanes and flew them into tall buildings. The twentieth terrorist, Zacarias Moussaoui was soon caught. He's even confessed, not only in writing but also during jury selection, hurling epithets at the prospective jurors. But now, after four years in the American judicial system, he's still not quite convicted and sentenced. There have been serious errors of procedure made by the prosecutors.

When George Bush announced we were invading Iraq, he described a wonderful world where, on the battlefield, the forces of Saddam Hussein would be vanquished and victorious Americans would arrive in Baghdad to be greeted as saviors.

"Everyone in the world has a desire to be free," he said. "We will bring them freedom and democracy and they will come out to the sides of the road waving flags to thank us."

And that would be that.

To tell you the truth, although I opposed the invasion of Iraq, I was at the time secretly pleased at his comments. America is the greatest nation on the planet. We pass wonderful laws to help the less fortunate, give everyone opportunity and freedom. We have all our freedoms, the right to vote, assemble and give our opinions. And if we don't like one party, we can throw the bums out. Who wouldn't thank us for bringing that to them?

Now that events have unfolded the way they have, however, I have changed my opinion. Our system is not this wonderful thing at all. Democracy is, as a matter of fact, only the least-worst of all political systems. It's slightly better than other systems. But in some situations, it's not even that.

If you're lucky, the leader is more good than bad. If you're not lucky he is more bad than good

The basic problem is the human condition. Humans are flawed. And if left to their own devices, they will cheat, steal, fight and worse. And so they need to be protected from themselves. It is also true that they can do good things. But for good things, you don't need laws. Just read any laws anywhere, in a democracy or a dictatorship. The laws tell you what you DON'T do. That's why we have them. A Democratic government is just one way to go about having laws. So it's nothing to be proud about.

Except it is. The genius of the American system, something that we SHOULD be proud about, is how each of the three branches of the government looks after the other two with suspicion. This was never done before. The assumption is made that in ANY government, if the people are being restrained from cheating, stealing, fighting and worse, then those doing the restraining could also cheat, steal, fight and worse. And so our founding fathers created the three branches of government. Each one, left to its own devices, could become corrupt. And so each could monitor both of the others. We call it checks and balances. It's designed to protect us from ourselves.

It seems to me that to bring this sophisticated system out into the Third world, into a tribal world or a backwards world, could be more than they could deal with. In a tribal or backwards world, you have a leader and you have some followers. If you're lucky, the leader is more good than bad. If you're not lucky he is more bad than good. And so, in the good column, we've had Hosni Mubarak in Egypt, King Hussein in Jordan, General Musharaf in Pakistan and King Saud in Saudi Arabia, all of whom are good friends of George Bush and the rest of us, and all of whom are either Monarchs or Dictators.

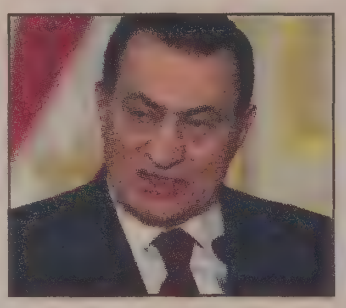
One wonders, when George Bush was talking about bringing Democracy to Iraq, what was in his mind about these other leaders? These are our allies in the war on terrorism. Meanwhile, in some of these other countries, when we bring in Democracy and get out the vote, who they vote for are the terrorists.

"George Bush is in favor of Democracy for Palestine," said Khalid Mashaal of Hamas, "but only if they elect who he wants them to elect."

It's time we called a spade a spade. The creation of a World Economy has awakened an ancient, medieval, brutal system of government that believes in death to infidels and obedience to a Religious Leader. The Leader invokes God, but Leaders have always invoked God. In this case, the Leaders invoke the Wrath of God for those who oppose them – so you can vote for them and go to heaven or you can vote for the other guy and go to hell. Or if God gets really angry, he can deputize us followers to mete out the wrath.



Hosni Mubarak

Ordinary citizens in these less developed lands hedge their bets when they vote. What if these Leaders are right about God?

Well, of course, they are not right about God. There is a blizzard of religious Leaders out there, all preaching that they know the way and others don't, when it comes to God. If I were to take a guess, I would conclude that there very likely IS a God, but it is very likely NOT Godlike for him to hand down his ordinances to one group and not another.

I think it would be particularly unlikely he would hand down his ordinances to a group that kills all those that don't believe he handed it to them. Radical Muslims bring down Buddhist statues, kidnap infidels, burn embassies and kill Christians, Jews, Hindus and anybody else that has a different idea than they do.

I think it is more likely that God looks down upon us and observes that there needs just a little more evolution to take hold here to get us up to snuff as far as greed, stealing, killing and other things are concerned. And if a bunch of us want to get up and make some kind of jerry-rigged government to bring order out of the chaos, then God Bless Them, so long as they don't try to take over the world. Could be a Monarchy, a Dictatorship, or maybe some sophisticated checks and balances called a Democracy. If they are bad, bring them up at the United Nations. That's what it's there for.

Pervez Musharaf

I think God might have been particularly amused by George Bush, a man who had fewer votes from the public but more votes from the Supreme Court to get himself elected that first time, now standing tall to argue for one man one vote in Iraq.

If George Bush didn't think America was so superior, he would have gone into Iraq with the idea of taking it over, putting together a puppet government, letting that fly for a while and then seeing how things might devolve after that. Could be there are three countries here. Sunniland, Shiiteland and Kurdland. But no. We're Americans. And we don't invade countries and take them over. Better to let chaos reign for years while we reinvent America there. And so passes four years.

Personally, I feel betrayed by what our President has done. He's held America up to a mirror for me. And it has made me see that America is no different than any place else. It's just that we had a bunch of founding fathers who were better at controlling bad behavior. Came in with checks and balances. And so we have Democracy. And I get to vote, though honestly, the two political parties are pretty much alike, so when you throw one group of bums out to get the other, it's just another form of checks and balances, with a few nuances thrown in.

Hooray for America. I guess. •

Whale Off

Appearance of a Leviathan Off Our Shores Stirs Memories of Whaling

By Grant MacMurray

Last week, hundreds of people along the shore watched as a rare North Atlantic right whale swam lazily along our coast for an afternoon. This newspaper thought, considering that Sag Harbor was one of the great whaling capitols of the world, it would be worthwhile perhaps to review the methods used in whaling in this community over the centuries. Here's how we ran out of our last energy resource, fishing it to near extinction — how it was done — more than a century ago.

"There is no fortune," my late wealthy great uncle was fond of telling me, "that does not come from the earth." I never quite knew what he meant. The rich I knew seemed to hover well above poor old terra firma. What with slight maturity I now interpret his meaning to have been is simply this: that human beings, modern or ancient, take their lives, their wealth, their sustenance from the very earth. This is not necessarily a no-brainer. It is convenient to think, even in the age of "oil addiction," that our mechanized, holier than thou lives glide easily over the surface of the planet as if by levitation or polished apple reward for the pains of learning to think. There is no such thing as self- sustained or perpetual motion. All energy comes from somewhere, all energy goes somewhere else.

The fortune of Sag Harbor, declared the United States first official point of entry on July 31, 1789, was made by the sea, and more specifically by the hunting of whales. Standing dumbly in front of the closed Sag Harbor Whaling Museum I was happened upon by a friendly apparition who asked me what I wanted to know about the town's history, and after listening to me hem and haw for a polite moment, told me that the town's location was logistically opportune, being the half way point between East Hampton and Southampton and a sort of no man's land where whale carcasses could be processed without cutting the native population in on the take. He then told me the history of the grand if weatherworn houses and just how they had come to be built.

> "Though man loved his fellow, yet man is a money-making animal, which propensity too often interferes with his benevolence." -Melville

The viability of the American whaling industry in the early to mid-nineteenth century centered on the large demand for whale oil, but while trips could be commercially lucrative, they were by no means always so; few crewmen were made rich by going to sea. It was, however, an age of necessity; people did not set out on two or three year journeys (Melville himself perhaps being the exception) merely for the fun or experience of it. The experience was, for the most part, pretty awful, and the chances of success were offset by the literal and financial catastrophe of an expedition gone wrong. The most famous disaster, the wreck of the Essex, occurred when Melville was a little over a year old and is considered a clear inspiration for his famous tome. A successful journey such as that of Benjamin Tucker's 1851 return to New Bedford yielded 73, 707 gallons of whale oil, 5,348 gallons of sperm oil, and 30,012 pounds of baleen (whalebone). The net profit of these notable if arcane figures, after expenses, came to $45,320, of which the owners' fortunate cut was between 60 and 70 percent. In the end, somewhere between $13,596, and $18, 128 was left to be divided unequally among Captain and crew for the labor of a few years. It was not uncommon for a crewman to end a journey in debt to his betters, having taken money in advance or owing the ship for niceties such as tobacco or boots. While these figures do not precisely rattle the mind of a post Microsoft world, it was then, and for some now, not the kind of money to be sneezed at.

While not efficient to the extent of the Plains Indians towards a slaughtered buffalo, the crew of a whaler was extremely conscientious when dealing with the valuable or desirable parts of the whale. Among these were sperm oil, a light straw colored oil from sperm whale blubber, spermaceti, also called "head oil," or "head matter," found in the skulls of sperm whales, a liquid wax used for the making of candles noted for their high melting point, the cleanness of flame, and the lack of discernible odor. The use of sperm oil and spermaceti continued into the 1960s in cosmetics, typewriter ribbons, and leather tanning. Baleen, found exclusively in the mouths of the Baleen whale, and made from keratin, the stuff of human fingernails and hair, was used for buggy whips, carriage springs, fishing poles, hoops for women's skirts, and the ever-important corset stays. To impugn the practice of whaling from a modern perspective merely because we no longer esteem buggy whips would be somewhat hypocritical. What society deems useful can be as transitory as a weather pattern, but the lengths we are willing to go for our own perceived convenience remains considerable.

A variety of roughly 75 species of whale were hunted, but, like in Moby Dick, our hero the Sperm Whale (to anthropomorphize him further) was the main target and combatant. Although the actual attack and sinking of the Essex in 1820 was a fairly isolated incident it was more than enough to base a book on. America loves the revelation of a metaphysical theme, whether or not we admit it at dinner parties, and we love the underdog, even if he happens to be a whale. The sinking of the Essex had all the trappings of a morality play about the contentiousness of we few and unspeakably gifted bi-peds against the totemic and unthinking world of the leviathan (nature or anything else). Think of Moby Dick as a thick chunk of someone's mind, a nice piece of whale blubber that we keep on the shelf and take down on occasion maybe when in our cups and desirous of a bit of healthy awing.

Although, "trying out," the term for the boiling, or extracting of oil from blubber was in the early days of whaling carried out on shore. As the whale population of the North Atlantic grew scarcer, the ships were outfitted with try works, large iron caldrons set in a brick stove for long journeys. From the yelling of "there (or thar in regional dialect) she blows," to the smelting pot was a time in which the ungodly boredom of days or months of waiting transmogrified into the frenetic deadly compression of lifetimes experienced in a few moments or hours. After the sighting by the lookout, the captain and crew would race to the whaleboats and lower them away. The boats' crews might insultingly be compared to a Princeton- Yale regatta in that each crew pulled their hardest to reach the whale first, and there was a boatheader who steered from the stern and exhorted his men to break their backs getting there, though as quietly as possible. Stealth of approach was key, as a whale's hearing can be remarkably acute, lest the beast "gally" (become frightened), and "sound" (dive). If the wind was amenable a rudder and sail were employed. If not they rowed. The harpooner then picked up his whale iron, a forged iron head mounted on a shaft five or six feet long attached at the blunt end to a coil of line. His task was to affix the whale to the whaleboat not, in the initial instance, to kill it. But harpooning the whale and securing him was arguably (and according to Melville) the most dangerous moment as the crew frantically backed the boat away from a stunned, frightened or angry whale. As the whale attempted to flee, he would dive, taking out line so fast that it would smoke from the friction. To slow the running, the line was often turned around a post called a loggerhead. The danger of getting snared by this zinging bolt of line was evident; a caught foot, hand or shirt would mean the speedy if picturesque death of a crewman or at least a severed appendage. Often the whale fled at speeds exceeding twenty miles per hour so there was a real possibility of the crew losing sight and contact with the ship. When the whale had exhausted himself the crew would

Roundabout Crazy

Here a Roundabout, There a Roundabout, Everywhere a Roundabout

By David Lion Rattiner

We all know about the traffic problems out here in the summer time and the local government's endless juggling of one idea after another to ease the problem. We have endless consultants coming into the towns and villages to whom we pay hundreds of thousands of taxpayer dollars to do studies for us. After crunching thousands of numbers, countless surveys and computer simulations involving matrices and other complicated things, they have been able to tell us that the traffic is bad and that there is not much we can do about it. Thanks a lot for the update.

But now it seems that we have another weapon in our traffic-battling arsenal and that weapon is the roundabout. The town of Southampton just recently approved a $258,000 bond to build a roundabout at Noyac and Long Beach roads in Sag Harbor. The total price tag for this roundabout is going to be $430,000. The extra is going to be addressed when the town actually begins construction, which has not really been figured out yet. This is because another roundabout located in Bridgehampton appears to have been a bad call.

Interestingly, the Town of Southampton is hesitant to go head first into building the roundabout on Noyac and Long Beach because the other one, located on Scuttle Hole Road and Mitchell Lane in Bridgehampton is drawing a lot of complaints by residents around the area. Complaints of poor visibility.

A meeting was held for all of the town officials for both the Town of East Hampton and the Town of Southampton at the Southampton High School to discuss the feasibility of using roundabouts all over the Hamptons to solve the impossible traffic that plagues the Hamptons during the summer months. A representative from a consulting firm called the Goyasco Traffic Consulting Group LLC held the floor to discuss the options. What they discussed was quite interesting.

The consultant from Goyasco Traffic Consulting Group LLC, named Margo Soda, had a lot of ideas that she presented to officials. She was trying to convince the towns to use her company as the next consulting firm that the town dumps money into.

ST. PATRICK AND ALL THE OTHER STUFF

By Debbie Tuma

It seemed more like a balmy summer afternoon than the beginning of spring as crowds lined Westhampton Beach's Main Street for their 39th annual St. Patrick's Day Parade last Saturday. The two-hour parade was led by this year's popular Grand Marshal, Charlie Bass, a long-time resident and community activist. He has been a 20-year member of the VFW Post in Quogue, where he serves as steward, and he has also been a grand knight at the Knights of Columbus.

As about 80 contingents made their way down Main Street, from floats to marching bands, scout troops, bagpipers, and even unicyclists, this reporter began to wonder where the tradition of the green started, and just who was this guy, St. Patrick, anyway?

Photos by Debbie Tuma

St. Patrick's Day is celebrated on March 17, the religious feast day and the anniversary of the death of Maewyn Succat, who, after his death in the fifth century, was named St. Patrick. The Irish have observed this day as a religious holiday for thousands of years. Succat was born in Wales about AD 385. Up until the age of 16, he was far from being a saint, since he considered himself a pagan. What happened

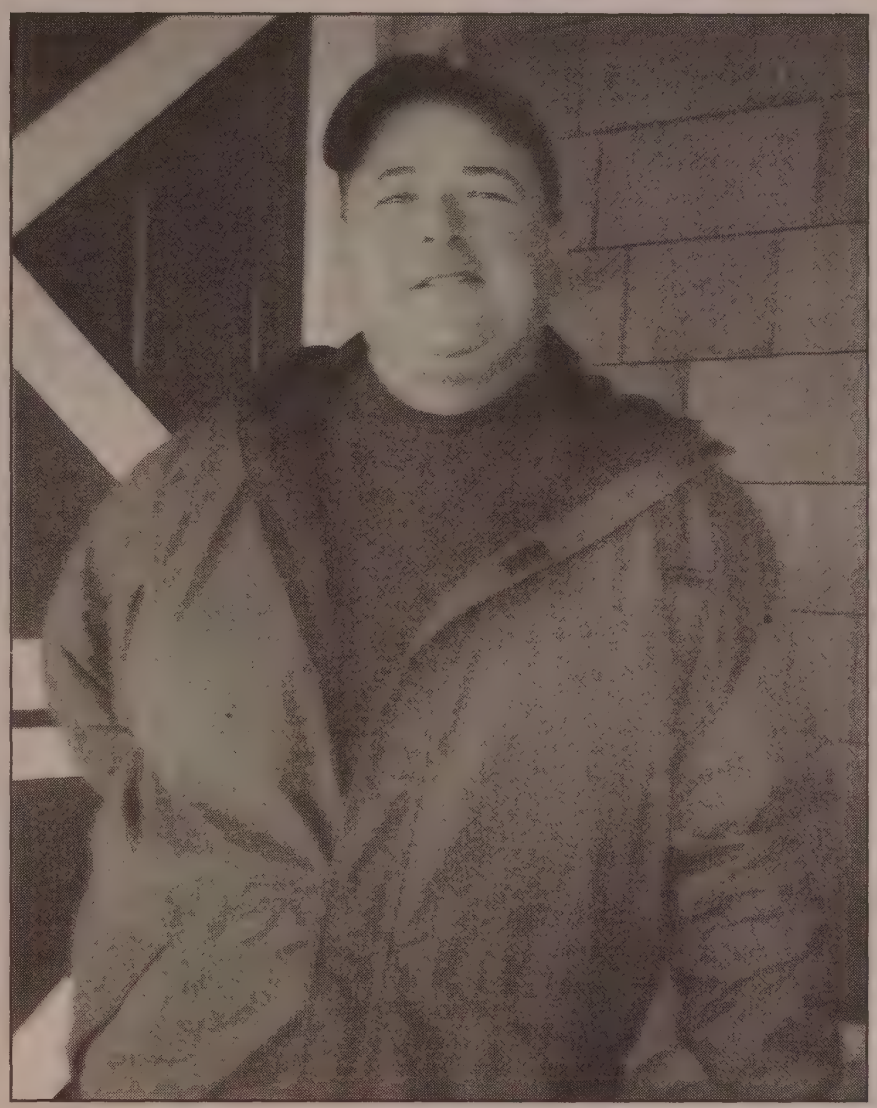
Who's Here



Richard Principi, Jr.
Builder

By Debbie Tuma

Growing up in a family of Amagansett builders, Richard Principi, Jr. constructed many homes and commercial buildings, which eventually led to the development of a 24-acre horse farm on Route 27 in this village. But when he worked for several years to build a 60' x 120' timber frame, post and beam horse show barn, he never dreamed that he would be trying to turn it into East Hampton's first vineyard.

"Even though I have since moved my family from the South to the North Fork, where I am surrounded by beautiful vineyards, I never thought of going into this business," said Principi, whose cousin, Richard Piscano, owns Roanoke Vineyard in Riverhead and is the vineyard manager at Wolffer Estates in Sagaponack. When Principi bought and cleared about 20 acres north of Route 27, behind the Amagansett IGA in 1995, he was at first thinking of putting up some affordable housing for seniors who want to stay in the Hamptons. But then, as his property went through some Town rezonings and two moratoriums, he figured that a horse farm would be a nice agricultural use of the land.

"My wife, Virginia, rode all her life, and my two daughters, Melissa and Jenna, have a horse," he said while on a recent tour of his property. "Also, my sister and business partner, Yvonne Velasquez, is married to a horse rider from Chile, named Amerterio, and their children ride." He said his family, which also includes his mother, Dolores, who is the CFO of the building business, "cleaned up this overgrown, fallow field." She has been a real estate broker for the past 30 years, and she and her husband, Richard Principi Sr., built many homes throughout Long Island. During the mid-1970s, they moved their family from Huntington to Amagansett, concentrating their efforts in the Hamptons, where they built many private homes, a tennis club, and several restaurants. Richard Principi, Sr. died in 1998, and Dolores continued, as the family matriarch, to oversee the development of the subdivisions and the design of the homes.

Walking through the 16-stall show barn, Richard Principi, Jr. went upstairs to show off the 3,900 square-foot high-end luxury home he built for his sister and her family. Yvonne is also a part of her family's building and real estate company. Her upstairs house, over the show barn, has six sleeping suites, seven and a half bathrooms, a gourmet kitchen with high-end appliances, and two observation cupolas that offer sweeping views of the ocean. Principi said if the vineyard goes through, he aspires to have a TV cooking show to pair wines with food and utilize this high-end commercial kitchen.

He explained how this beautiful building with hand-hewn beams will hopefully become a winery, and how an adjacent, huge sunken sand ring, designed to train horses, will perhaps become a wine storage building. Since the Town has asked him to preserve 70 percent of his 24 acres, Principi said he would like to grow grapes, which is a "perfect passive use of the property, which contains prime agricultural soils."

On the other hand, as outlined in his proposed plan, a total of six, half-acre lots along the railroad tracks will have six single-family shingled homes, each averaging between 2,800-3,200 square feet.

"With all the grapes growing around this property, they would block the view of the railroad tracks," said Principi, who first submitted his proposal for this winery conversion to the East Hampton Town Zoning Board on March 1. His plan proposes converting his horse show barn into the winery, and constructing a 17,000 square-foot wine storage building where the sand ring is now. He has not yet submitted building plans for the winery or wine storage building. The entire horse farm property is still on the market for $40 million.

Principi's corporation is in litigation with East Hampton Town over the upzoning and rezoning of their property over the years. "The town rezoned and upzoned everyone in the Comprehensive Plan, which changed our yield and increased our open space," he said. "It wasn't intelligent or profitable. We've had an ongoing lawsuit, but we're in negotiations now," he said.

Principi said if his vineyard proposal goes through, he would begin planting grapes in 2007. "On the South Fork, we can only grow white grapes, because of the weather and growing season, so we'll have Pinot Grigio, Chardonnay and Sauvignon Blanc," he explained. "We would be the fourth vineyard on the South Fork, and also, as we say, the closest one to France."

After graduating from Amagansett Grade School, and East Hampton High School in 1980, Principi studied engineering at Villanova University, and then took over his father's building and construction company, R. Principi, Inc. He married the former Virginia O'Conor, and they eventually moved to Southold, where they now live in a former oyster shellfish hatchery, with a deep water dock where they keep a boat.

"When my Dad died, seven years ago, we sold our home in Amagansett, and moved to the North Fork, where our family had a farm in Peconic called, 'Blue Horizons Bluffs,'" said Principi. "We had six summer cottages on the Long Island Sound, and we loved this area, so we found a home on three acres within the 20-acre Shell Fisher Preserve."

She brought up the idea of building a roundabout at the beach where the Sagg Main parking lot is. She suggested that cars no longer be able to gain access to the parking lot, but have to enter a roundabout which will bring them back to Route 27 West, which will bring them back to New York City. "If we set up the roundabout there, then the traffic will start pouring out of the Hamptons in the other direction towards New York."

"But what about the traffic going back?" a trustee cried.

"Maybe we put up a stoplight? I don't know. I can tell you that it would work though."

Indeed. There are other roundabouts in the Hamptons. There is one located in Sag Harbor where Route 114 and Short Beach Road meet one another that seems to work fine for just about everybody and does keep traffic flowing. So roundabouts are working for the Hamptons and that is why they want to build more.

Looking to our friends in the west, there is a roundabout in Europe that works really well too, but you have to be willing to risk death to use it, which might deter people from getting on the road in the first place, which probably alleviates some of the Parisian traffic. If you have ever taken a vacation to Paris, you probably checked out the Arc de Triomphe monument, where if you travel to the top of the monument you can check out the largest roundabout in the world. It is pretty ridiculous. There is basically a four-lane highway, only there are no lanes, which run around this giant monument in the middle of Paris. If you are lucky, you'll be able to catch a Parisian motor-scooterist dodge almost certain death as a truck cuts right in front of him. There are skid marks all over the road. Lots of car accidents.

Margo Soda brought this up to East Hampton officials, "Maybe we build a big arc in the middle of East Hampton where Newtown Lane meets Main Street. We could put a roundabout there like the one in Paris. It would cause a lot of accidents, which means fewer cars on the road. Make good business for mechanics and body shops."

"Now there's an idea," Rachel Greensome, the town communicator and owner of Rachel's Auto Body Shop in East Hampton said.

Back in Bridgehampton, you would be surprised to see some pretty significant skid marks at the Scuttle Hole roundabout, which is never a good sign. The Southampton Town Supervisor has spoken publicly about the problems of this roundabout and plans on addressing them and fixing them. Which is good, I think. Well, that's assuming that roundabouts are good, which they are, sometimes.

We are caught between a rock and a hard place out here in the Hamptons. There are just a lot of cars and not a lot of roads. But maybe, just maybe, there aren't enough roundabouts, as Margo Soda put it, "We need to go roundabout crazy out here and get the cars going in the other direction. Maybe we even send them into the ocean. I'm not sure, I need to study it more."

At another meeting, Ms. Soda said perhaps they could build a roundabout on Main Street in Southampton across the street from Saks Fifth Avenue, but make it illegal to use the roundabout unless you had a special roundabout sticker which you have to get at Southampton Town Hall and which you place in the back left side window of your car. The sticker would be free for residents but cost $500 for non-residents. The town would only make available 300 of these stickers to non-residents, who would be able to purchase them in advance. If none are left for them, then they get put on a waiting list.

"So what you are saying is that we ticket non-residents if they drive on a village roundabout without the proper roundabout sticker?" said Southampton Roads and Trains Commissioner Richard Holdberry.

"Yes. I say you charge them a ticket of $150 if they use the roundabout without the sticker. It will bring more revenue to the town and fewer cars will drive on the road to avoid the ticket," said Ms. Soda.

"Now that's an idea! Hear, hear!" The village officials jumped to their feet and began clapping.

Maybe if we just set up more of these roundabouts all over the place then all of our traffic problems would be solved. We just need to figure out where we should put them. We need to hire more traffic experts, the same consultants that we have used for years and years whose expertise has...well...hey, they're experts, we got to hire them and also Goyasco Traffic Consulting Group LLC. By the time they are done with us, we might come up with something else to fight the traffic problem besides a roundabout. Of course, we'd have to hire some consultants to study that idea too. Then we'd build it and then we would find some problems with THAT. Round and round we go.

Oil Change

If you're anything like me, you never get the oil in your car changed on time. In fact, you never really show up for anything on time unless it is really important, like making it to a movie. For the past month, I have really been pushing the envelope when it comes to the oil in my car. I know that you are supposed to change it every 3,000 miles, but I just feel like the car works fine with old oil in it.

As a young guy, you would think that getting the oil changed in my car would be a real priority. After all, my car is the most expensive thing that I own, I love it more than most things in my life, and yet, I have absolutely no problem going two, even three thousand miles over when I am supposed to change my oil.

I'm worried that I am going to be a bad father. I mean one day I want to have kids and do the whole thing, but if I'm not responsible enough to get the oil changed in my car on time, how am I going to be able to change a diaper on time? I absolutely love my car. I mean, I seriously love it. I get in my car and drive for no reason. Sometimes, if I get a new CD, I'll go out to the driveway and just sit in my car and listen to it because my car has a great sound system.

I even pay for my car to get washed. That isn't cheap! It's like twenty-five bucks, thirty if you give a five-dollar tip. But hey, my car has to look good. But an oil change? Ah, that can wait. My little baby will be able to go for another thousand miles with rotten, sludgy oil running through it.

How can I do this to something that I love so much? Is it the money? I think that it is. Every time I pass a gas station I look at my odometer, then look at the upper left corner of my windshield where there is a little sticker that is there to alert me when I should get my next oil change. Needless to say, these two numbers are off by a couple of thousand.

I don't care though. I will simply drive right by the gas station and say, "I'll do it later." I don't even set a date for when I am going to do this for my car, I just keep driving right on by. It's called procrastination. It's a genetic thing, I think.

I take care of my car in every other way, except for the oil. As far as I can tell, my car is in tip-top shape. I drive it carefully all the time, I check the air in the tires whenever I get the chance to and if I ever hear even the slightest noise, I immediately take it to the shop. If the window washing fluid runs out, I fill it back up almost immediately. Same thing goes for sand in the car, I vacuum it out no problem.

If I continue with the logic that I am going to take care of my future kid in the same manner that I take care of my car, it means that my kid is going to be very clean most of the time and whenever he gets dirty I'll make sure he takes a shower. Also, if he wears glasses, he'll always have some glasses cleaner in his pocket to clean them whenever he wants to. He's going to be safe all the time too, I'll never let him run over the speed limit anywhere. Let's not forget that if I hear even the slightest cough coming from him, he is going to head straight to the doctor. My son is going to appear completely perfect to the outside world. Well, except for the whole diaper issue.

I really have to do something about this. I can't have a kid running three thousand baby steps overdue for a diaper change. Maybe my future wife will take care of the diaper issue. I'll take care of getting him waxed, I mean cleaned, and she'll take care of changing his oil, I mean, his diaper. That will be a compromise, she'll go for that.

What happens if I get a divorce, though? Then I'd be back to square one, I'd have to change my oil on time once again. Maybe I could set up an alarm system of some kind. After all, if you don't change the oil, at some point, your car will die. I don't want my baby to die!

Maybe I'll just make a pact with myself that I will never, ever get a divorce, no matter how bad it gets. Yeah, right. It probably won't even be up to me. Who is going to want to stay with a husband that isn't even responsible enough to change the oil or even a diaper for that matter? I'm doomed!

I might be over thinking this, but I have come to the conclusion from this analysis that if I want to stay married to my future wife, then I should start getting my oil changed on time today. If there is any advice I can give you today, it is to get your oil changed. I hate getting my oil changed.

South Forks by boat. He is also working with his brother-in-law to eventually import wines from Chile and sell them on his vineyard. "There are excellent wines from Chile, and we'd import and bottle them as a third label," he explained.

Since it would take four to five years to get his first yield of grapes after planting them, Principi said he would hope to buy grapes from the North Fork to produce his first vintage. When it gets up and running, Principi explained, "This will be a state of the art, premiere, organic vineyard. We hope to cater many events, including wine tastings, corporate retreats, antique car shows, charity fundraisers, and even weddings on premises. It will be a new kind of experience for the Town of East Hampton."

to change his thinking was a devastating event that took place that year. He was sold into slavery for six years by a group of marauders who raided his village. It is said that during his captivity, he became closer to God, learning to pray. After escaping his captors, he went to Gaul, where he continued his religious studies in a monastery. Feeling that his calling was to convert pagans to Christianity, he traveled all over Ireland for 30 years, setting up schools, monasteries, and churches. He converted the Irish country folk to Christianity, and eventually he retired in County Down. Upon his death on March 17, AD 461, the Irish have celebrated "St. Patrick's Day" in his memory ever since.

There is much Irish folklore surrounding St. Patrick's Day, with many people believing that St. Patrick raised people from the dead. There is also a rumor that St. Patrick preached sermons from a mountaintop that drove all the snakes from Ireland. Since snakes aren't native to Ireland, some say this is just a metaphor for converting the pagans to Christianity.

St. Patrick's Day was originally a holy day, but it has become a secular holiday. The Saint Patrick's Day holiday first came to America in 1737, being celebrated as a custom in the city of Boston. Many people still wonder why the shamrock is used as a symbol of this holiday, and why people wear green. The shamrock was first used by St. Patrick as a symbol of the Trinity of the Father, the Son and the Holy Ghost. Rumor has it that people wore green to symbolize the first green of spring, since this holiday falls just before this season.

Although the New York City St. Patrick's Day parade is always on the 17th of March, around Long Island, St. Patrick's Day parades fall on different days. Westhampton Beach is usually held the week before the Montauk parade, so as not to compete with other events. Many of the same contingents appear in more than one parade as well. The East Moriches parade was held last Sunday, in the rain.

This year, the Westhampton Beach Fire Department, which marched in the parade, celebrated its 75th anniversary. There were also fire and ambulance contingents from East Moriches to Hampton Bays, and there were marching bands from Nassau County to Westhampton Beach. The popular "Coneheads" float from Montauk had a New Orleans theme this year. The colorful "Twin Forks Red Hatters" wore purple and red outfits with big wide-brimmed hats. Lots of children were dressed in St. Patrick's outfits on the Raynor Country Day School and the WHB Nursery School floats. The "Cycling Murrays" created lots of attention when they rode their unicycles down the street, dressed in Irish sweaters.

Ron and Peggy Bassett were standing outside the Beach Bakery with their son and daughter, enjoying the warm sunshine and waving green flags. "We live in Westhampton Beach, and we come here every year, but this year is the biggest and the best so far," said Ron. "It's really the luck of the Irish that they got the warmest day of the year for this parade. It's the unofficial beginning of the season here."

As usual, this parade displayed every type of transportation, from vintage and modern sports and race cars, to antique fire trucks, and boats hauled on trailers. From the sidelines, families watched with their kids, who reached for the candy and balloons that were tossed from the floats. People even decorated their dogs for the occasion — with green ribbons, collars, and sweaters. On St. Patrick's Day, everyone is Irish.

Following the parade this year, people decided to enjoy the great weather, and many walked around to the local pubs and restaurants. Lines wrapped around Magic's Pub and Starr Boggs Restaurant, as well as other local places, for green beer and corned beef and cabbage.

This coming weekend, the St. Patrick's festivities will continue in Montauk, which is rumored to have the second largest parade in the state, only to New York City. On Friday is the Friends of Erin's annual Grand Marshal's luncheon at Gurney's Inn Resort, and on Saturday night is their cocktail party at Gurney's, which benefits their big parade, which kicks off on Sunday afternoon. St. Patrick himself would be proud of all this celebration!

roads — are on a small spit of land that forms the most easterly shore of Northwest Harbor where it fronts onto Gardiner's Bay. Farmers settled there. Sheep and cattle were raised. Crops grown. Fishermen surfcasted and went clamming. There was a schoolhouse. A mill. You can walk around up there going up and down these dirt roads. The East Hampton Historical Society on Main Street can provide you a map of these foundations.

In 1827, the largest property in the area, a parcel fronting for a quarter mile on Gardiner's Bay in the very heart of this village, was bought by a rich man named Josiah Kirk. Mr. Kirk, in spite of all laws, built a fence that went along both sides of his vast holdings, and down the beach and into the water. Until he did that, the local residents were freely able to walk along the beach, gathering, among other things, much of the dried seaweed that washed up there. The seaweed was used as house insulation, pillow and mattress stuffing and packing for the shipping of produce from the farms. Now this beach was off limits. There were other beaches, but the fences rankled. And they were illegal.

People tried in vain to get Mr. Kirk to remove his fences. When he would not they applied to the courts. The subsequent legal battle raged for years and years, ultimately costing Mr. Kirk $40,000 in legal fees and the townspeople about half that. (This was a huge amount of money at that time.) Eventually, the townspeople simply gave up and moved away, leaving Mr. Kirk and his fences the only thing standing in that woods. As for Mr. Kirk, who ever since has been known as Bad Josiah Kirk, the fight bankrupted him. He was taken away and died before his time in the Arms House, a Poor house in Yaphank, Long Island.

It's all in the history books. All you have to do is look it up.

St. Patrick's SEASON???

Wow! What news! All over the media, they're saying "St. Patrick's Season," not St. Patrick's Day! Sure 'n begora....when was the day expanded to a season? I mean, it's always been that way for my family, we start drinking on the 15th just to get a head start, but we didn't want to force the rest of the country into it. And yet... here it is....

But why, why was the day expanded into a season?

Is it because we won the Civil War for the North? General Robert E. Lee was quoted saying to Grant, "The only reason your side won was because you had more Irishmen." Is it because we built old New York, especially the Brooklyn Bridge? Is it because we brought River Dance here? Is it because we brought The Three Tenors?

Is it because we added colorful language to American English? Like, the Paddywagon = a police wagon to transport groups of unruly people; Donnybrook = a fight, usually followed by a paddywagon; Bushmills = Irish water of life, usually followed by a donnybrook and a paddywagon, Irish Flu = a hangover, usually preceeded by Bushmills, a donnybrook and a paddywagon.

Is it our colorful linguistic contradictions? A unique feature in the Irish and Irish American patois is our contradictions. Everybody loves them. Here's some I remember hearing growing up: "He'll regret it to his dyin' day, if ever he lives that long." [translation - he is in soooo much trouble] "Don't be in such a hurry that you arrive before you get there."[translation - don't rush] "If you get there first, leave a chalk mark in an obvious place. If I get there first, I'll erase it."[translation - whoever arrives first, just wait for the other one] "He's on the wagon now... barely a bottle a week." [translation - court ordered AA meetings] "Well, do your best to end up there in the first place."[translation - give it your best shot] I thought everyone understood this way of speaking until I saw Waking Ned Divine (a great movie by the way) with a southern friend and we were hitting "pause" every thirty seconds so I could explain to her what was just said!

Is it because we brought Marion Morrison (aka John Wayne), Bing Crosby, Maureen O'Hara? Grace Kelly, Gene Kelly, Spencer Tracy, Jimmy Cagney? Bill Murray, Ryan Stiles, Drew Carey? Jackie Gleason, Mickey Rooney, Art Carney? Daniel Doone, Davy Crockett? Henry Ford, John F. Kennedy, Ronald Reagan? How about Matthew McConaughey, Liam Neeson, Pierce (my heart) Brosnan? And Sean Connery?.... I don't care if he was raised in Scotland, he's ours....

Is it our Irish Coffee? Alex Levine the writer said, "Only Irish coffee provides in a single glass all four essential food groups: alcohol, caffeine, sugar, and fat." Is it our corned beef and cabbage? Our soda bread? Our terrific tea? And of course, our greatest contribution to mankind... beer. I know the ancient Egyptians brewed it and many other cultures as well, but nobody got it right till Guiness did. And there isn't an Irish American family in this country that doesn't have its own panel of experts to verify this.

Maybe it was our movies that got us a whole season of recognition.....The Quiet Man, Going My Way, The Bells of Saint Mary's, Angela's Ashes, My Left Foot, Finian's Rainbow, Ryan's Daughter, Michael Collins, Far and Away, and many more.

Our music perhaps? American blue grass is right out of Irish folk music. Danny Boy alone had to get us a few points... everyone thinks it's a girl/boy love song. It's not. It's a father singing to his son whom the British conscripted into a far off war. That's why it's sung at police and firemen's funerals. It's a ballad for a fallen son in uniform. What about MacNamara's Band? Everybody knows those words!

Maybe America is just tired of the party pooper atheists trying to squelch any holiday that has any religious connection. This could be just the beginning of an antipooper movement. There's plenty of tragedy and suffering to go around. We need all the excuses to celebrate life we can get!

But, whatever the reason, we thank 'e for the season, we'll do a little drinkin' and talk a little treason' [translation - thanx for the party expansion, we're gonna have a few extra and argue over everything].

May the road rise up to meet you and the wind be at your back... Happy St. Patrick's Season!

ready to go, having been abandoned by Long Island University in the spring of 2005 after years of mis-management (again) by that university based far away at its Brooklyn headquarters.

But as Stony Brook looked into the matter, two further things became apparent. One was that the old LIU Southampton College had a stellar marine biology program that deserved to be preserved. And two was that Southampton and the Hamptons in general, as a second home for some of the wealthiest people on the planet, could offer the opportunity for considerable fundraising. Not that Stony Brook needed fundraising. It's a State University. But for the special things, and for the very finest programs that would enable Stony Brook to compete on the national collegiate stage for fine students, it might be possible to bring in programs that could not otherwise occur.

At this writing, the purchase of the Southampton Campus from LIU is almost complete and as many as 1,000 students should be in attendance on the campus here in September. The faculty and administration at Stony Brook has expanded greatly on the core idea of a Marine Biology program in Southampton. They expect to offer an entire range of environmental programs. Stony Brook Southampton will specialize in that curriculum.

But as time has gone on, something else has become apparent. And that is the opportunities that lay on the table if Stony Brook University Hospital should take charge of Southampton Hospital. The basic reason, which is similar to the reason that the Stony Brook was attracted to the college, is that this hospital is already in place and running in an orderly and well regarded fashion in spite of its debt. But now there is another reason. These wealthy people in Southampton, and in the rest of the Hamptons for that matter, expect and can afford the very best of health care right here in Southampton if they can get it. And they are willing to pay for it. Until now, the $40 million bond, with its 7 1/2 percent interest and draconian prepayment clauses, is a great elephant in the room. Who wants to donate large sums to a hospital if all the money is being spent to line the pockets of bondholders rather than to provide better medicine?

A purchase of, or arrangement with, Southampton Hospital by Stony Brook University Hospital would solve that problem, for the same reasons of scale that Southampton College's problems were solved by Stony Brook University. And with the hospital's financial problems under control, the energy would flow as never before, not only with money but with ideas and technology. Great wealth and brilliant physicians go hand in hand. And much would flow back and forth between Southampton and Stony Brook. There is even the possibility that teaching facilities for Southampton Hospital could find their way to the Southampton College campus. It's only ten blocks away.

This is a win-win situation, it seems to me. All it has to do is happen.

It has just been announced that Charlie Gibson officially gets Bob Woodruff's network evening news chair at ABC. While Gibson has been aiming for the anchor position since the late Peter Jennings signed off, the network wasn't willing to fulfill his demands at first. Months ago, he went back to "Good Morning America," which he and Diane Sawyer have co-chaired since 1999. With the network's second blow, the injury to handsome and popular Woodruff, with ratings not soaring, and co-anchor Elizabeth Vargas pregnant, ABC has welcomed Gibson to their team.

pull on the line to draw the boat to the animal. At this point the boatheader and harpooner changed places. The boatheader carried his lance to the fore and plunged it into the soft spot above the whale's heart or lungs. The whale would then drown in his own blood. The death agony of the whale played out in a dance known to crewmen as the " flurry," in which the whale swam frantically in ever diminishing circles until he shuddered and turned on his side, dead.

Thus, after hours of exertion, high drama and danger, it might take the crew three or more additional hours to return with the carcass to the ship.

The process of trying out needed to be performed immediately to keep sharks from eating into the profits. The crew, working in six-hour shifts, labored night and day until the whale had been processed. The fire was lit beneath the try works and square chunks of cut blubber known as "bible leaves" were cooked until the oil was rendered. During this process, the hull of the ship would be engulfed in thick greasy reeking smoke which pervaded the entire ship. The head of the whale was separated into three parts. The case at the top of the whale's head produced the purest oil. The oil hardened on contact with the air into a white-waxy substance worth five times more than common blubber oil. The junk or lower half of the forehead was deemed inferior to that of the case but better than standard blubber oil. A head might contain up to 500 gallons of oil. The jaw and teeth were usually saved for scrimshaw.

Naturally the rendering process was nearly as hazardous as the hunt itself, with men slipping from the blood and oil and falling to the sharks below, or being crushed under the weight of enormous chunks of blubber. Finally the ship was cleaned, although it was said that the smell of smoked blubber could never be fully eradicated.

As we drive around cursing oil prices, slightly scared that our nice cushy lives might soon suffer from what is turning out to be a finite source of the wealth of the earth, let us remember that we've been in this situation before, perhaps perpetually since Gravity pulled some rocks together or God shouted, "Action!" My great-uncle never mentioned wealth coming from the sea, but I take for granted that it was implicit in his statement; sea is earth as well as land. Even as the tools of whaling became better and more efficient so did the whalers innovate themselves right out of business. Today our other oil companies are hard at work on alternative fuels, cleaner, safer, better— one step closer to that perpetual motion machine that will keep us well-heeled and on the move forever (if not happy). But let us just think a moment before sailing off to the paradise that our cozy new century promises to be, about the century that was and the things that fueled it and the tragic stupid wondrous and teeming journeys of our ancestors; and about how survival gets complicated for the brightest and cleanest burning little species on the planet.

TWO FORKS & A CORK

Bright, bold and beautiful works of art by local schools greeted guests to the Parrish Art Museum's annual business council event "Two Forks and a Cork" on Friday, March 3rd. Local businesses mingled and sampled delightful wines from 14 different vineyards, hors d'oeuvres and cheeses while listening to the Wayne Burgess trio. One of the evening's highlights was an auction of fine wines and rare vintages from local vineyards. All proceeds benefit the museum's ongoing educational programs.

Bells In North Fork Churches Are Going Digital

By R.B. Stuart

An idea, which was common centuries ago, was that the sound of church bells was a safeguard against lightning and violent tempests. Therefore, the bells were rung vigorously during storms. With Easter approaching you may no longer hear the deep, piercing sound of church bells, but instead a prerecorded version.

Here on the North Fork, churches such as the St. Agnes Roman Catholic Church in Greenport and others are leaning towards using the electronic version of bells, a digital replication of the old standby, which are now used instead of the iron bells that are actually in the building. So much for warning the masses.

Electronic bells, known as singing bells, seemed to have sparked the interest of Microsoft. They have introduced a Windows Pocket PC operating system that they boast sounds so real, "You'll want to climb the tower to see the bells." With over 900 hymns to choose from, it's like having an i-Pod for the liturgy. And why not, with the high price of carillons?

But I guess we shouldn't be complaining. This is just another thing that is going digital, like so many other things that already have, such as dating, sex and marriage.

If you would like a taste of history, bells came into use in our churches as early as the year 400, and a town in Italy called Campania claims their introduction to the world. There use spread rapidly, as in those unsettled times, the church-bell was useful not only for summoning the faithful to religious services, but also for giving an alarm when danger threatened. Bells were introduced into the Eastern churches about the ninth century and some of the largest in the world were found in the great cathedrals of Russia.

Bells are made in either cast iron, brass or bronze and a good quality sound depends on the metal, brass being the ideal ringer for sound and appearance. Bells range in weight from 400 pounds to 7,000 pounds and are between four feet in diameter to nine. They sell pre-owned bells just like pre-owned cars. And used Church bells can cost $1,600 and up. So maybe it's more economical for North Fork Churches to convert to digital bells. Besides, who can they hire to ring them, their jobs have probably been out-sourced, and with a boom in plastic surgery, let's face it, there just aren't as many Ogres around as there used to be.

I guess it is appealing to the Church staff to have access to a library of over 900 beautiful digital recordings of bells and music at your finger tips, safely stored on a computer chip just awaiting a holiday, wedding or funeral. Next they'll be hooking up Karaoke machines to the sound system and you'll be able to hear the Nuns echoing through the streets as they sing-a-long to "Deck the Halls."

But will this remote control bell frenzy in our North Fork churches end there? Or could confessionals be the next wave?

Imagine the loud and exuberant movie phone voice coming on when you open the confessional door, saying, "Hello! And welcome to confessional! Please press buttons 1, 2 or 3 depending on the severity of your sins. If you've never used electronic confessional before press zero and a priest will be with you to explain its usage. If you've pressed three say nine Hail Mary's."

Geeze.....isn't anything sacred anymore? Now churches are converts to the technology age we find ourselves trapped in. And we go to church to find escape from this. Maybe in the not-to-distant future they'll have prerecorded sermons, telling everybody this is the end of the world. To make sure you're covered in the after life when the electronic basket comes around scan your debit card and enter your pin number. Then when it's time for communion you'll walk to the front of the church and in place of the pulpit there will be a Holy ATM machine draped in black cloth. You'll stick your hand or tongue out and it will spit out a blessed wafer and instead of a chip of bread, it will be a Microsoft Micro Chip. Now that would be a church.

Voices Against The War

The Vail-Leavitt In Riverhead And The North Fork People Of Conscience Work Together

By R.B. Stuart

The North Fork People of Conscience will be marking four years since the start of the war on Iraq with a benefit on Sunday, March 19th, called Voices Against The War, at the Vail-Leavitt Music Hall in Riverhead. Their annual fundraiser to Honor the Fallen memorial consisting of laminated panels with photographs and biographical data of American troops killed in Iraq and Afghanistan since the US invasion, totaling 2,400 soldiers and 25,000 casualties.

The program for Voices Against The War will include two films, one by 16-year-old Southold High School student Matthew Daddona. The short film, "Recruit Me" was brought about by the constant barrage of military recruiters in the school system. Some recruiters show up five days a week trying to bait the children into signing up.

Last year the NFPOC was demonstrating in Riverhead at the army recruiting office when Daddona armed with a video camera, spontaneously decided to attend the protest. "I began filming people and asking them why they were there. I learned about NFPOC, and as a filmmaker wanted to get the perspective of many different people on the same issue. That's when I discovered recruiters were going after kids," Daddona remembered.

Daddona, who wants to be a journalist and filmmaker, found family and friends rallying around him to help edit it down to a 20-minute short. He learned not only that his mother, a photographer, had film making experience, but he learned the importance of listening to people. "I think the problem with Americans is we're quick to talk and don't listen to what others have to say. And through conversation and listening there can be a resolution. It's the differences that make Amerieca's democracy system so fascinating," he admitted.

His advice to other kids about recruiters, "Be politcally and socially aware of your surroundings, and don't believe everything recruiters have to say. The military does benefit many people, but by targeting underprivileged kids, it can also take things away," Daddona concluded.

The NFPOC is making a conceited effort to make sure all the schools have the OPT–OUT program in place, where the children can send letters taking them off the government's list.

The other film, "Occupation: Dreamland," a documentary directed by Garett Scott with an embedded film crew. This 72-minute film will take you on patrol with Alpha Company, 2nd Platoon from the 82nd Airborne Division into Falluja, Iraq, giving you a voyeur's eye into what it's like to be a soldier in Iraq.

The afternoon speakers will be Michael Harmon, a recently returned Iraqi Vet and member of Iraq Vets Against the War, who was deployed as a combat medic with the 4th Infantry Division. Carmen Trotta, a well known Catholic Worker activist and John Phillips, a retired NYPD officer who was arrested for protesting in Senator Hillary Clinton's office and Joe Giannini, founder of East End Vets Against the War.

Shelter Island NFPOC volunteer and mother of three boys, Gwynn Schroeder fears a possible draft. "I have two sons that are 17 and one 19 years old, and even though I know the military is terribly taxed, I feel mixed about the draft. If there were a draft, I'm sure people would come out of the wood work against it. And when it comes to schooling, if you're not financially independent and your children aren't registered for the draft then they're not eligible for student loans. So personally, I'm scared," Schroeder admitted adding, "There were many different ways to handle the situation and there are always peaceful soltutions."

The North Fork People of Conscience is a group of concerned citizens who want to see the soldiers brought home. Pat Hovey, NFPOC founder and volunteer said, "Last year it was a day of peace, this year we're looking for people to come and say "that's enough." If we as Americans don't do something, then we're all guilty because we all know what's going on. This administration opened a Pandora's box and there doesn't seem to be a way to close it," Hovey stated.

If you'd like to be part of a growing voice of discontentment or aren't sure of what you think, they'll be plenty of people there who will give you food for thought. There will be refreshments, T-shirts, bumper stickers, post cards, videos and DVDs available for purchase. Honor the Fallen photo memorial will be on display to view. All funds raised from the event will be used to create more laminated panels for the living memorial.

The ticket prices on Sunday for Voices Against The War benefit is $10 for adults, $6 for seniors and students and are available at the door. The doors open at 1:00 p.m. and the event runs from 2:00 p.m. to 5:00 p.m., at the Vail-Leavitt Music Hall, 18 Peconic Ave. Riverhead. For more information please call The Music Hall at 631-727-5782. To contact NFPOC e-mail nfpofc@optonline.net or you can call Gwynn at 631-298-4912.

OVER THE BARREL... with Lenn Thompson

What Did We Learn at Lenz?

Last weekend I had the unique chance to blind taste several wines from The Lenz Winery against great (and much more expensive) wines from Burgundy and Bordeaux at an event held for Lenz wine club members.

Lenz is well known for using blind tasting such as this one to advance its standing in the overall wine market. In a 1989 tasting against French heavyweights like La Grande Dame, Chateau Petrus, J. Drouhin, Montrachet Marquis de Laguiche, and Veuve Clicquot tasters were unable to single out the Lenz wines as inferior in quality.

Saturday's tasting wasn't nearly as ambitious. Chateau Petrus is insanely expensive and buying it for 25 people would have pushed $50 per person event fee to "$400 or $500" according to winery owner Peter Carroll.

The Lenz average price of the Lenz wines tasted was $20 while the French bottles averaged $90. But, this tasting wasn't just about differences in price. As winemaker Eric Fry put it "This is a beauty contest. Whatever wine you like best is the winner."

The first flight, dedicated to crisper-style chardonnay, pitted Lenz Winery 2003 White Label Chardonnay ($12) against 2003 Jean Louis Chevy, Puligny-Montrachet ($35). Tasted blind, I chose the Lenz as my favorite because of its nearly flawless balance. By comparison, the Jean Louis Chevy seemed tight, lean and flat.

Flight number two featured Lenz Winery 2001 Silver Label Chardonnay ($15) and 2001 Domain Leflaive Clavoillons, Puligny-Montrachet ($80). Again, I preferred the Lenz wine, by a narrow margin, which again seemed much more balanced while the Burgundy was a little raw in the oak department and lacking fruit.

It is worth noting, however that both chardonnay flights were served a bit too cold. Over-chilled Chardonnay is a pet peeve of mine.

Our next flight featured two Cabernet Sauvignon-dominated bottlings, Lenz Winery 2000 Cabernet Sauvignon ($30) and 2000 Gruaud-Larose, St. Julien ($115). The Lenz was complex, with intense berries, toasty-sweet spices and was almost meaty, with ripe tannins. Very approachable, I thought it was drinking much better than the Gruaud-Larose, which was a bit restrained and high in tannins. Five to ten years from now, when it's peaking, I expect that I'd prefer it to the Lenz, however.

The last flight of the afternoon put Lenz 2000 Estate Selection Merlot ($23) up against 2000 Figeac, St. Emilion ($105) and 2000 Le Bon Pasteur, Pomerol ($110) in a supposed "Merlot Flight." Only 30-percent Merlot (with 35-percent Cabernet Franc and 35-percent Cabernet Sauvignon) the Figeac seemed out of place, while the Le Bon Pasteur seemed a bit "off" to me and it may have been slightly corked. It was complex, smoky but extremely tannic and obviously not peaking. Again, the Lenz wine won me over as the most ready to drink today.

The room was a little dark and the flights were rather rushed, but what did we learn? Never assume that a $100 wine is going to taste better than a $15 bottle — especially when the $100 bottle is a still-young Bordeaux. With substantial tannins, it really wasn't fair to compare them to the Long Island wines, which are ready now.

We also learned that while Merlot still rules Long Island, our Chardonnay is a real bargain — especially the $12 White Label from Lenz.

As Fry put it, "The definition of a good wine is that you like it," which means that, for me Lenz Winery makes good wine.

North Fork Artist of The Week

Painter/ Photographer, Nicke Gorney

By R.B. Stuart

Nicke Gorney has always wanted to be an artist from as early as 12 years old. She's always had a fascination with the artist's life. With an interest in art and literature, oddly enough, she wasn't drawn to painting but instead as a pre-teen had the romantic notion of being a writer. "In my late teens and early 20s I became more visual with photography and painting and the process of making art," Gorney remembered.

Gorney, an only child, was born in Montreal. With an American father she split her time being raised in Canada and New York City. "As a young man my father came to this country from Poland. In his early years he was a writer, poet and actor. But because of the struggles to care for his family he stopped, along the way, eventually losing his passion to write," Gorney explained.

Her desire for the written word came from her father's side as her Uncle, Jay Gorney who in the early 1930s wrote the song, "Hey Brother Can You Spare a Dime."

But she decided to pursue her interest in psychology and attended college, which turned out to be very turbulent years for her. "I didn't want to go to college but had to. I've always hated those social norms," Gorney admitted. "By my mid 20s I left Montreal and moved to New York City where I would delve into making art. It became my primary thing. I've pursued it ever since without looking back."

She exhibited her work in New York City at the Ward Nasse Gallery, Ceres Gallery, Sixth Sense Gallery and St. Marks. During her time in the city she curated the Art Farm, a place where internationally known poets, writers and visual artists performed and exhibited.

Gorney moved to the North Fork in 1994 where she showed her work at the Gallerie Pelar. She also showed 16 pieces at the Heckscher Museum of Art in Huntington, the Yellow House and two dozen other solo and group shows. After 25 years of painting, what she loves about it the most is the color. "I've always loved color, that's what made me want to paint in the first place. In the beginning I tried to control it, now I'm a slave to it," she conceded adding. "I'm constantly engaged and that's what I love about it. It's this transparency looking through the light and it's very intriguing to me. I also like working by myself," she laughed.

"The biggest struggle for me is making the art turn out to be what I imagined. It is also challenging marketing yourself. I'm an artist, not a sales person. I know that's a big part of being an artist, but the struggle mostly lies in making the art, there I say, bring it on," she exclaimed.

She now lives in Greenport where she's able to create her abstract paintings on a large scale and incorporating her love for photography. "With my photography I guess I'm a little bit of a voyeur. I want to know the stories of my subjects, more in a cinematic way. I call them still narratives. The spontaneity of it interests me and I am totally consumed by it," Gorney confessed.

Gorney draws inspiration from the abstract expressionists Rothko and deKooning, and of photographers Diane Arbus and Cindy Sherman. Throw in a dash of filmmakers from the 1970s and she comes out with collages with a political vein running through them.

"My life is about making art. I wanted the artists life as a kid and now I have it. I may not be famous, but I'm successful in making art," she said.

She is passionate about doing the right thing. "I'm happy that now everything is coming out about the Bush administration. So many people think that things are never going to change. But if you acknowledge something's wrong you have to make changes," Gorney ended.

You can get in touch with Gorney by e-mailing her at thegroovymind@mac.com

ART IS LIFE IN THE PLAY, ART

While we've often heard the expression "Art imitates life," Yasmina Reza's play Art takes the statement one step farther. Art is life. Thus, it doesn't take long to realize that the "art" in question, a minimalist white- on- white painting, is a metaphor for the relationship between among lifelong friends.

Disagreement over the work's value serves as a vehicle for the men to examine their own worth. The results are fortifying even if the process is agonizing. We'd like to say this play is about a rite of passage, even if the Minimalist style does not enjoy such consideration: the jury is still out concerning its merit.

Initially, the painting, like the friendship, appears definable and discernible. In the painting's case, we either like it or we don't. (The men take a more passionate yet more changing position as each progresses, in various ways, from loving the piece to hating it.) At first glance, the friendship also seems perceivable. There are no ambiguous or secret motivations behind the men's mutual respect, although they recognize and accept each other's faults with good cheer.

As the play (and life) continues, however, the men begin to examine more closely the painting and their relationship. They begin to notice aspects of each that they didn't see before. For example, the painting now assumes different shades of white or even additional colors.

The men also ascribe traits to each other that taints their original perceptions. For example, Marc (John Beuscher) now accuses Serge (Tom Gustin) of betraying him, rejecting his role as a mentor. Serge responds by blaming Marc for controlling him. Both men now see Ivan (Stephen Hamilton) as superficial.

Both the painting and the friends have become objects of scorn in the process. Gone is the idealism that previously bound them together. Curiously, such conclusions are resolved through the use of "deconstruction," a theory/methodology questioned not only by the play's protagonists but by many critics in real life who thought the approach was too intellectual for interpreting art works.

Simply put, deconstruction is a way of determining meaning by examining various aesthetic elements and their relationship to each other; it's akin to taking a car's motor apart to see how it operates.

While such knowledge can lessen the surprise and wonder of life, the process helps the protagonists, allowing them to face the truth, painful and glorious as it may be.

Art, directed by Stephen Hamilton and produced by Josh Gladstone,can be seen at Guild Hall until March 19. Call 324-0806 for information.

Honoring the Artist: Nicole Bigar

This week's cover artist, Nicole Bigar, is a full-time resident of East Hampton, a place she says that she has been in love with for many years. She goes on to speak about the area, not only with spirit and enthusiasm, but also with a refreshing and rare kind of elegance.

She says, "The wonder of seeing buds turning into brilliant flowers has always dazzled me. The minute I reach East Hampton on the Jitney, I live. I breathe. I am home."

People describing her work have written about it with equal elegance, calling her creations special, the mixing of techniques, "from the nervousness of line to the volume of paint... keeping it all together with the vibrancy of color. Humans, plants and animals all play a prominent role in her work."

We can understand such descriptions, especially when they signify Ms. Bigar's physical environment. First, there's her beloved home, a place she has occupied with her husband, Raymond, for 45 years. It's overlooking the sea, surrounded by flowers, plants, and, of course, humans. (Yours truly will always remember a quiet summer day spent with Ms. Bigar and her family years ago. It was an experience that remains in the memory, especially the relationship she shared with her then-young grandson.)

Ms. Bigar's latest paintings reflect this setting in another way: a series of landscapes showing what happens when water meets the sand. Such subject matter becomes profound when Ms. Bigar uses actual sand from different nearby beaches to conceptualize her theme.

Yet it's Ms. Bigar's interest in philosophy (and perhaps mythology, too) that served as a potent inspiration for this series as well. "I had been reading from Genesis," she notes, "and the beginning of life. That's why these basic elements, the water and sand, appealed to me."

Ms. Bigar is also drawn to other primary aspects of life, perhaps because, as she says, "I have been so lucky, I want to help people."

Such aspirations take the form of her teaching art to young children at Boys Harbor in Harlem. It's a job she apparently relishes, sharing a remark that a six -year-old student said to her last week: "Miss Nicole, you have so much imagination." Her voice was filled with pride and wonderment.

It's Ms. Bigar's sense of wonderment that allows her to enjoy traveling, particularly to Cambodia. As she describes the people and culture, the sense of motion, the rhythm of the country's vegetation and sculpture, we can imagine that her observations there have also inspired her work.

Wherever Ms. Bigar travels, however, she is always close to home.

And we don't necessarily mean her physical home in East Hampton, but her spiritual one as well.

–Marion Wolberg Weiss

Ms. Bigar will be showing her work at what was formally The Laundry Restaurant. The opening reception is Friday, March 15 from 4-7. The exhibition will continue for three weeks. Her works will also be on view in New York at the Que Gallery (601 W. 26th Street) starting April 25 for three weeks.

Dave Evans'

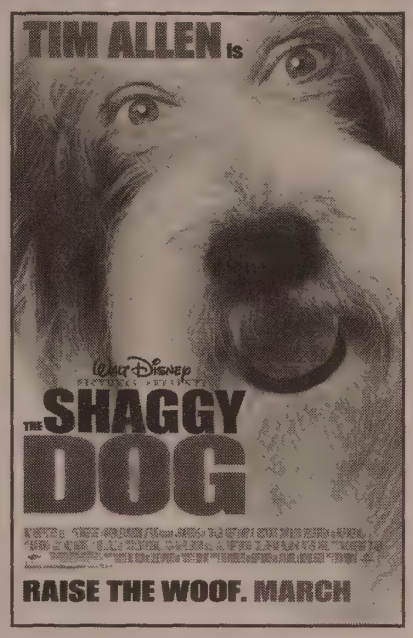
MINI – MOVIE REVIEWS

V for Vendetta

The Wachowski brothers try to put those terrible Matrix sequels behind them in this highly stylized adaptation of the classic Alan Moore graphic novel. An amazingly sinister view of a dystopic London, with classic character actors from Britain's Stephen Fry to Australia's Hugo Weaving, the film is dark, compelling and topical.

She's the Man

Trying to emulate the success of Ten Things I Hate About You, director Andy Fickman's follow-up to the hilarious Reefer Madness: The Musical takes its twists and turns from Shakespeare's gender-bending proto-romcom Twelfth Night. In spite of strong material and a largely capable cast, this lacks bite and comes off as too twee by half.



Find Me Guilty

Sidney Lumet continues his seemingly never-ending career with this light biopic of mobster Jack DiNorscio who acted as his own defense lawyer in the longest Mafia trial in the history of America. Vin Diesel as DiNorscio is surprisingly affable and it is nice as ever to see Linus Roache as the prosecution. An enjoyable, if ultimately unmemorable courtroom drama.

Failure To Launch

Trip (Matthew McConaughey) is a successful thirty-something who refuses to fly the nest. Sarah Jessica Parker's Paula is the honey-trap hired by his parents to finally lure him into growing up. Lo and behold, the two fall for one another and so on and so forth. Kathy Bates, as Trip's mother, is simply too good for this dross.

The Hills Have Eyes

It hardly seems necessary to re-make Wes Craven's 1977 classic, but it's a welcome break from saccharine nonsense. The Carter family heads out into the desert and following an ill-advised turn into the wilderness, find themselves stalked by a clan of raging psychopaths. It's no Texas Chainsaw Massacre, but gruesome and diverting all the same.

The Shaggy Dog

In the land where sitcom stars come to die, The Shaggy Dog at least has pedigree. Tim Allen and "Sex and the City's" Kristin Davis star in the story of Dave Douglas, a man who occasionally turns into a large, longhaired dog. Hilarity allegedly ensues. Director Brian Robbins (anyone remember Varsity Blues?) takes the helm for this lazy sham.

Dave Chappelle's Block Party

An unusual combination of comedian Dave Chappelle and director Michel Gondry (at his most accessible with Eternal Sunshine of the Spotless Mind), the film is a kind of musical-stand-up-documentary. Chappelle pulls together an impressive line-up of stars to accompany him, including a reunited Fugees, but it is his charisma that truly drives the film. Comic genius.

16 Blocks

Richard Donner, director of the esteemed Lethal Weapon tetralogy, takes the helm for this better-than-average buddy movie. Bruce Willis plays Jack Mosley, a world-weary cop assigned to transport a witness to the courthouse. Predictably trouble comes every which way. Willis is his usual charming self, while Mos Def, as the witness, is becoming an actor to really watch.

Aquamarine

Okay, it would be ludicrous to claim that this story about two twelve-year-old girls and a mermaid was anything but kitsch with a very limited audience. That said, there is something nice about the earnest cheapness of the whole affair. The screenwriters are fresh from TV ("Sex and the City," and less impressively "Joey"), it's the director's first feature, and neither girl is Dakota Fanning.

Eight Below

Two explorers find themselves stranded in the Antarctic following an accident. Their dogs escape into a nature-film sequence, leaving the men to struggle back to camp. Paul Walker may be a pretty face but this alone is not enough to sustain the soul-searching that the story requires. This is Frank Marshall's first time in the director's seat since 1995's Congo. It has not been worth the wait.

Saturday April 8th

SWEET LIBERTY

Alan Alda's highly successful role in The West Wing can't compare to his long time standing here on the East End. Here's the 1986 comedy he wrote, directed and starred in as a professor having a Hollywood troupe make hash of his historical novel. Sag Harbor has not seen such madness since Michael Caine, Michelle Pfeiffer, Bob Hoskins and the crew left.

Saturday April 22nd

WHISPERS IN THE DARK

It's an Alan Alda celebration! In this 1992 thriller he proves his versatility as part of a twisty murder mystery of psychiatric terror in a complex maze. Starring Annabella Sciorra, Anthony LaPaglia and Bridgehampton.

Saturday April 29th

EVERYONE SAYS I LOVE YOU

Alan Alda sings??? Yes and everyone in the star crowded cast: Goldie Hawn, Julia Roberts, Drew Barrymore and many more. Woody Allen also warbles in his story of an upscale screwy family who travel to Venice, Paris and East Hampton.

Saturday, May 6th

BASQUIAT

Montauk painter Julian Schnabel's serious bio-pic of the street artist's flash rise to museum fame and near instant death at 28. Gallery workings are seen with David Bowie as Warhol, Jeffrey Wright as the artist and then there's the huge Montauk studio.

Saturday May 13th

SHE-DEVIL

Hell hath no fury like a wronged Long Island woman. Meryl Streep gets her just rewards for stealing Roseanne Barr's no-goodnick husband. Untrammeled mayhem and laughs from Barr's makeover while destroying her ex and wealthy romance novelist Streep.

Saturday May 20th

THE WORLD ACCORDING TO GARP

John Irving's jarring account of an unorthodox mother Glenn Close and odyssian son Robin Williams who hop-scotches over our shores absurdly and melodramatically. John Lithgow as a transsexual stops the very busy traffic.

Guy de Fraumeni's Hollywood In The Hamptons

Dave Chappelle's Block Party & 16 Blocks

I surely knew what "blocks" were when I wuz a rotten little kid skittering across the hard streets of the city. Later, in Connecticut and the Hamptons, blocks were gotten at the local ice house for warm parties and that was it. I guess a mental you-know-what erased the others. Now, suddenly, two films are released, tumbling back the rock-hard streets that can not melt away.

Dave Chappelle's Block Party is exactly that – a celebration held on Brooklyn streets. It's a glorious inspiring collaboration of African-American artists unifying urban solidarity of positive purpose. The party is given by a terrific, uncompromising Dave Chappelle and many guest performers include The Roots, Erykah Badu, Jill Scott and Mos Def, who is starring in the other city streets movie, 16 Blocks.

He hits the pavement with tough street pounding veteran Bruce Willis, who plays a has-been Jack Mosley, a NYPD detective assigned to protecting Mos Def's weasely convict character, Eddie Bunker, and escorting him 16 blocks from the precinct to a courthouse. Tired old Jack can hardly get himself from one corner to the next. What with huffin' 'n' puffin,' trying to get past the biggest hurdle – a neighborhood bar. He'd even locked big mouth Eddie in the car and left for a shot (booze that is) only to have assailants shooting up loose-lips Eddie, who can't talk his way out of the way of a barrage of bullets.

Sixteen city blocks may not seem very far but the film's venerable action-with-fun director Richard Donner (four Lethal Weapons) is able to pack his fast 105 minutes of unmitigated rat-tat-tat action with enough runaway varieties of evasion: down crowded streets and alleys, stairways (both up and down), over rooftops, running a mad-cap, menacing gamut that just won't quit. The time honored pairing of black and white works very well since Mos Def, a most deft hip-hop artist is, along with Ice Cube, one of the best rapper-actors. He is able to make a grating, annoying criminal loveable. "Cousin" Brucie is right on his mark, doing all the things he does best. He's let his over-extended franchise "die hard." He's back to acting. 16 Blocks is the kind of movie one shouldn't try to resist if you buy a ticket and sit for it. Just flatten out and let it trample rough shod over you. Take the whizzing bullets, smoke screens and the deceitful, double-crosses. Remember, in this movie you can't trust anyone. That is – no one! Not even me.

About Dave Chappelle's Block Party, dare I say, "Trust me"? This film is much more than the common, household TV music grab bag. It is a remarkable event that can lift you to unrestrained heights. When Kanye West, in sporty clothes and gold chains, on a nailed together, put up stage, furiously raps a direct, shouted out message to the Almighty, it is made more exclamatory because he's in a shambling alley in Bedford-Stuyvesant. This is an example of Chappelle's wry and righteous genius. He does not push his non-conformity into your face. Instead, he chooses to throw his party in a run-down but real place. Not the classy venue of Paul or Carly Simon, ritzy Central Park. A bigger audience there perhaps, but, not as discerning as the Bed-Stuy constituency that really knows the music. Is that weird of Mr. Chappelle?

Sickos, among the bloggers and other malicious people, have assaulted Mr. Chappelle for giving up his multi-million dollar cable television deal. They think anyone who turns down money has to be crazy. Chappelle feels, "I don't want to shuffle – I want to dance." How difficult is this for reasonable people to grasp?

This new empowering black concert has been directed by the French, not-black, director Michel Gondry (Eternal Sunshine of the Spotless Mind), who begins and interspaces Chappelle's return to his hometown, Dayton, Ohio, where he asks the CSU band, an unbelievably vibrant and forceful marching band, to join the RB/rap concert in Brooklyn and, do they ever! The mix is a part of the marvelous conglomerate of so many other artists and pieces and ideas and concepts, all the way to the Reggae anthem "President," Wyclef Jean's worldly question, "If I was president……"

Hey, it could happen! as the New York Lottery puts it.

Guy Jean de Fraumeni is the producer/writer/director of award-winning European and American feature films. He has been a judge at major film and TV award competitions, including the Oscars, the Emmys and various film festivals. He is assisted by Sarah Halsey.

Silvia Lehrer's Cooking Column

I adore pasta, I delight in rice, but like the Irish, I'm passionate about potatoes. Potatoes were introduced to Europe in the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries from Peru where they originated. Ireland was one of the first of the European countries to recognize and cultivate the potato. Unfortunately, this "bread of the poor" would one day fall under the terrible potato famine of 1846 in Ireland, when the entire year's crop was lost.

Whether you're cooking corned beef and cabbage, poached salmon or an Irish stew for St. Patrick's Day, here are potato side dishes to augment your menu. A sauté of potatoes and onions has origins in Parma, Italy. The original incorporates pancetta or prosciutto. (While the latter ingredients add lots of flavor, I didn't miss the meat in this luscious dish.) We're in the middle of potato country where local red new potatoes abound. Skillet rosemary potatoes may be familiar but do revisit this irresistible classic. Pommes de Provence is a take on scalloped potatoes, incorporating fresh herbs and the richness of cream. These potato recipes have origins from outside of Ireland, but as we've always been told, "we're all Irish on St. Patrick's Day."

CASSEROLE OF POTATOES WITH ONIONS

This tasty casserole has origins in Parma, Italy.
Serves 6

2 pounds Yukon Gold or all-purpose potatoes
2 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
1 tablespoon unsalted butter
1 very large yellow onion, trimmed and thinly sliced
1/4 cup chopped flat-leaf Italian parsley
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper
1/2 – 3/4 cup chicken broth, preferably homemade

To serve: Garnish with coarsely chopped parsley, optional

1. Cut the potatoes into 1/2–inch thick slices and soak in a bowl of cold water.
2. Meanwhile, melt oil and butter in a 10-inch skillet As butter foam subsides, add onions and sauté for 3-4 minutes until onions are slightly tender but not colored, add parsley and stir to mix. Drain the potatoes and layer them over the onions, seasoning each layer with salt and pepper. Add the broth, cover the skillet and cook, without mixing or stirring the potatoes for about 15 minutes. Add more broth as needed. By that time the potatoes should be cooked, soft but not mushy, and the broth completely absorbed. Serve hot from the pan or transfer to a warm serving platter. Sprinkle over extra parsley if desired.

SKILLET-ROAST POTATOES WITH ROSEMARY

These potatoes are crisp and crunchy on the outside and tender within – an irresistible combination.
Serves 8

3 pounds red new potatoes, peeled and quartered
1/2 cup extra-virgin olive oil
3 tablespoons chopped fresh rosemary
1 teaspoon coarse salt
Freshly ground pepper
2 tablespoons unsalted butter, cut into small pieces

1. Place potatoes in a large pot. Add enough cold water to cover. Cover pot and bring to a boil. Reduce heat and simmer until potatoes are tender, about 14-16 minutes. Drain. Arrange potatoes on a clean kitchen towel and drain thoroughly. Can be prepared up to several hours ahead to this point.
2. Place potatoes in a large skillet. Drizzle oil over the potatoes and sprinkle with rosemary. Season with salt and pepper and toss potatoes to coat. Dot potatoes with pats of butter. Cover pan and cook over medium heat, shaking skillet and turning potatoes occasionally, to brown on all sides, about 16-18 minutes. Serve immediately.

POMMES DE PROVENCE

For ease of preparation, use the slicing blade in your food processor to slice the potatoes. Use light pressure to obtain thin even slices.
Serves 6-8

4-5 Yukon Gold potatoes, about 2 1/4 pounds
Enough milk to cover the potatoes, skim or 1%

Persillade and Herb mixture
2 cloves garlic, finely chopped
2-3 tablespoons flat-leaf Italian parsley, finely chopped
1/2 teaspoon each dried marjoram, basil and thyme
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper
1/2 cup heavy cream
1/4 teaspoon nutmeg
2 bay leaves
Preheat oven to 375 degrees

1. Peel and rinse potatoes and slice about 1/4 inch thin. Put into a saucepan and pour on just enough milk to barely cover the potatoes. Place over moderate heat, bring to a boil and simmer about 12-15 minutes until tender but not falling apart.
2. With slotted spoon, transfer half the potatoes to a buttered shallow baking dish. Combine the garlic and parsley (persillade) and layer half along with half the herb mixture, a healthy sprinkle of salt and pepper, and half the cream. Spoon on remaining potatoes and repeat layering. Finish with a sprinkle of nutmeg and tuck bay leaves under some potato slices. Can be prepared ahead to this point.
3. Place in preheated oven and bake 40-45 minutes until top is crusty and golden. If top is dry, add a little more milk or cream, return to oven and bake for 5-6 minutes longer until surface is glazed. If necessary, slide under the broiler for a minute or two to color the top. Remove bay leaves and discard before serving. Serve hot.

All the Makings of a Good Irish Toast

A St. Patrick's Day tradition here in the States, along with green beer, corned beef and cabbage and, of course, a parade, is Irish Soda Bread. But the Irish Soda Bread we enjoy is very different from the bread eaten in Ireland, though most Americans might not be aware of this. In fact, it might be surprising to know how different the traditional Irish Soda Bread looks and tastes. The soda bread our Irish ancestors have baked and consumed for over 100 years is soft and dense with a slight sour taste and a hard crust. It is part of the daily diet and eaten with a meal, not as a special treat or dessert.

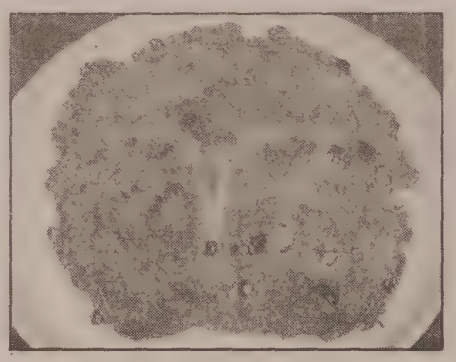
Soda bread is a staple in the Irish diet that has been around since around 1840, when baking soda was introduced as a replacement for yeast. There are variations on this popular bread, according to geography and taste preferences.

Bread can be brown or white and there are two different types, cake and farl. The cake form of Irish Soda Bread is typically found in the Republic of Ireland and is a round shape with a cross-shaped cut on the top. The myth of why the cross is placed on top of the bread claims that it is to ward off evil spirits. But it also allows the bread to rise, and makes it easier to cut the bread into four segments after it's baked.

Farl is usually made in Northern Ireland and is cooked on a grill, which creates a flatter bread.

Flour, baking soda, salt and buttermilk are the basic ingredients to make the bread. If you don't want to use buttermilk, use regular milk and add 1 Tbsp. of vinegar or lemon juice for every cup of milk. Another option is to add 1 3/4 tsp. of cream of tartar for every cup of milk. One other possibility is to buy a dry form of buttermilk. But there are lots of recipes and ways to use the leftover buttermilk. Pancake, waffle, biscuit, muffin and cake recipes call for buttermilk.

Raisins, currants, or caraway seeds can be added but traditional soda bread in Ireland does not have any extra ingredients.



Irish Soda Bread is a tradition in my house, one I intend to continue and pass on. My Nan, my mother's mother, was of Irish descent, and we made soda bread together every year, but not only on St. Patrick's Day. My Nan would always remind me to use fresh ingredients, caraway seeds especially, as she joked, she had made the mistake of using old spices and the bread didn't come out well. It is a great tradition to add to the festivities of St. Patrick's Day. Irish Soda Bread complements tea and coffee well; and also is perfect for breakfast. The bread does not stay fresh long, but is delicious right out of the oven or toasted with butter.

The following recipe is a sweeter variation of the bread. For a more traditional bread, use 1 1/2 to 2 tablespoons caraway seeds and no sugar. Of course, if you are not baking the traditional version, feel free to experiment with ingredients.

Irish Soda Bread

1/2 cup currants or raisins (optional)
3 1/2 cups all-purpose flour
1 3/4 cups cake flour
1/4 cup sugar
1 teaspoon baking soda
2 teaspoons fine salt
1/4 cup unsalted butter, cut into small pieces and chilled
1 1/2 cups buttermilk

Position a rack in the middle of the oven and preheat to 400 degrees F. Lightly butter a baking sheet.

Put the currants in a medium bowl and cover with hot water. Soak for 15 minutes and drain.

In a large bowl, whisk together the flour, cake flour, sugar, baking soda, and salt. Add the butter and, using your hands, work it into flour mixture, until it is about the size of small peas. Stir in the currants.

Add the buttermilk and stir with a spatula, just until the flour is moistened and comes together to form dough. Turn the dough out onto a floured work surface and knead lightly until just smooth, about 1 minute. Form the dough into a ball and place on the center of the prepared baking sheet.

Using a sharp knife cut a 1/4-inch-deep "X" into the top of the dough. Bake until well browned about 1 hour.

Transfer the bread to a cooling rack or serve immediately. If not serving right away, wrap loaf in tea towel to prevent it from drying out too much. If not eaten, wrap well in foil or plastic wrap to keep as moist as possible.

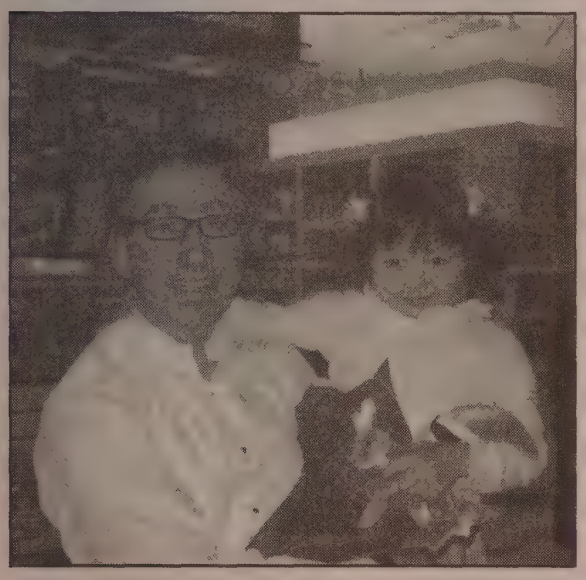
JUST FOR KIDS

EAST END KID: BUNNY HOP



BY EMILY HART POST
WITH A LITTLE HELP FROM KATLEAN DE MONCHY AND DAVID POST

Dad and I went to FAO Schwarz for the "Bunny Hop," an annual event to help the Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center. It was very crowded and that is good news for the hospital – more money for them. When we first got in I saw all those giant toys, especially the 10 and 20 foot stuffed animals, and anyone who has been to my house knows how much I love stuffed animals. So while the men were hanging around the Rockettes, I went with Dad to a game booth to try to win – yes, you guessed it – stuffed animals. And I won a few little ones, an anteater and a kangaroo. Then I saw my old friend (not a good way to say that, 'cause we are not old), but my friend from a year ago, Bianca Scotto. Then we ate kid-sized food and I saw my favorite magician, Magic Al – I found out his name was NOT "Magic Owl," which is what I thought. He makes me laugh. He had just started his show and I got a good seat on the floor to watch. He does such silly things that it even makes Dad laugh. Al said, "Hi" to me. We did a few more things at the Bunny Hop, but Dad said it was time to go home. It was such a fun night, I just wanted to stay. We got a goody bag from the sponsor, Ralph Lauren Childrenswear.

When In Manhattan... BY OLIVER PETERSON

After the Parade

March 17th, this Friday, once again marks Saint Patrick's Day. I've written about the world-renowned parade before, so I won't be redundant, but the holiday in Manhattan has a lot more going on than men in skirts, marching, bagpipes, and drunken revelers. New York City has a rich Irish history with traces found in almost every corner of the island.

Probably the most famous Irish neighborhood in New York is Hell's Kitchen. The district loosely known to be west of Eighth Avenue between 34th and 59th Streets is still a little rough around the edges despite recent attempts to include it in the great facelift of Manhattan. The site of West Side Story, State of Grace, and Sleepers has a long history of violence including fights, race riots, and gang activity. It is the home of the fictional Sharks and Jets, but, in reality, Hell's Kitchen is the birthplace of the infamous and brutal Westies – the Irish Mafia. In a history written by Kirkley Greenwell, he cites a tenement on 54th as the first "Hell's Kitchen," but he also recognizes a frightening building on 39th as the original. Regardless of where it actually began, the name stuck and fit well for a place bathed in blood and fire (arson was common there). During the first hints of the area's gentrification, in the 1950s, as actors moved in to be near the theater district and developers worked to reverse the reputation of the embattled neighborhood, those same developers changed the name to "Clinton" after former mayor and governor DeWitt Clinton. Although the name officially changed over 50 years ago, no one really seems to buy it. There are some great restaurants and pubs in the area today, but the institution of Hell's Kitchen is indomitable. The residents continue to battle against a changing and ever more homogenized city. This was most recently exemplified in the shooting down of a massive proposal for a new NY Jets stadium and shimmering center for commerce and tourism.

When the parade is over, maybe head up to Hell's Kitchen and hit some of the Irish and Irish American restaurants and bars in the area. You can bet that the Guinness will be flowing, the corned beef and cabbage will be hot and delicious, and people will be in good cheer. You might even catch a little impromptu step dancing. Just don't wear orange or, for God's sakes, a Union Jack.

Restaurant Row is home to quite a few good places to stop. Try the Irish Rogue at 356 West 44th between Eighth and Ninth Avenue. They have traditional Irish breakfast all day with black and white pudding and Irish sausage, or try their Irish beef stew, or the classic beans on toast for a true taste of European unpleasantness.

Also in Hell's Kitchen is the weekly Hell's Kitchen Flea Market. The city's most well-known and popular flea market used to be in Chelsea, but now resides on 39th Street between Ninth and Tenth. There are up to 170 vendors selling everything from antiques and vintage clothing, to toys, collectibles, art, and furniture every Saturday and Sunday. The parade is on Friday, and the flea market really has nothing to do with Ireland, or Saint Patrick, or parades, but if you decide to hang out in the Kitchen for the weekend, you might kill a couple of hours there.

Speaking of Saint Patrick, and at the risk of once again being redundant, you might consider visiting Saint Patrick's Cathedral this weekend. It is, after all, the epicenter of the parade's sentiment. I recently wrote about the church, so I'm not going to explain it again. To new readers, I'm sorry, but thanks for joining the party. If I see you in the street, the next pint's on me.

It's funny how all of this comes together, because another venue I covered this year – the Nokia Theater in Times Square – is hosting Shane MacGowan and the Pogues for three nights starting Saint Paddy's Day. This is the greatest contemporary Irish band of all time. Forget U2, the Pogues are the real deal and MacGowan is a messy poetic and musical genius. Run to get tickets to these shows. If you don't know their music, buy Rum, Sodomy, and the Lash. You can thank me later. Be safe this weekend, but don't be too responsible. You can stand the heat.

Take a hike with Ken Kindler

The Old Tar Road

This past Wednesday morning I woke up feeling much recovered from a bout with the flu. I looked at my website and found that a hike was being led in Montauk's Hither Woods by Eva Moore of the East Hampton Trails Preservation Society. It looked like just the thing. I enjoy walking with Eva. It would be a small group on a Wednesday in winter, and the trailhead is easy to find, with safe parking. On this not too cold, clear day a handful of seasoned hikers started out on the Parkway Trail heading east. I grabbed a map from the kiosk nestled in the woods on the east end of the parking area. Even though the Parkway Trail has a Serpent's Back Trail sign, we had to travel several hundred yards before we could make the right turn onto the black-blazed Serpent's Back Trail. We passed by the Ocean View Trail (marked with orange blazes) and continued on the Serpent's Back Trail north. This trail runs parallel to the Powerline Road. The Powerline Road is a straight line traveling Hither Hills from north to south. The Serpent's Back Trail climbs up and down the undulating knob and kettle topography, much akin to what you might imagine a trip along a serpent's back might be like. Where the trail runs straight up the hills, the soil is washing away and ravines are forming. Some of these ravines are quite deep. Ideally, a trail is built along ridges and across slopes so that water will wash across them, instead of straight down them. That is how a sustainable trail is built. When you look at the Serpent's Back Trail it seems that it's built to shadow the path of the Powerline Road, that may explain the imprudent construction. On occasion, mountain bikers enjoy the mad rush down the Serpent's Back, so hikers should be prepared to jump off the trail at a moment's notice; bikers usually call out when they see hikers ahead.

We found the blue markers of Flaggy Hole Road and followed that trail to an unmarked trail heading north to the Old Tar Road. The Old Tar Road runs parallel to and south of the railroad tracks. Normally, if I am walking on my own, I will walk the Paumanok Path to the north of the train tracks or along the Old North Road to the south. After all, who goes into the woods to walk on a paved road? Well, in all fairness to this path, I found it a pleasant trail to walk, and much of the road seems to have dissolved into the woods. When we arrived at Fresh Pond Landing Road, we turned right (headed north) to cross the railroad tracks at grade. Be alert for trains when crossing the tracks; this is an active railway. As soon as we crossed the tracks we turned right again and walked an unnamed trail east along the railroad tracks until we reached the Paumanok Path. Traveling west a short distance, we found the short spur trail to the Waterfence Overlook where we spent some contemplative moments gazing out over Block Island Sound. We then followed the white blazes of the Paumanok Path west for a mile on the portion of the path known as the Stephen Talkhouse Path. Fresh Pond is visible from the trail and there are several cleared areas where you can rest while looking out over this enormous pond. We then turned left onto Elisha's Valley Trail. This trail took us back over the railroad tracks. We made a quick right on Old North Road, and then a left onto the Petticoat Hill Trail. After a short distance we were back at the parking lot.

The Hither Hills Overlook Parking lot in Montauk is on the north side of Route 27, about one mile east of the Montauk Parkway and Old Montauk Highway split. It is a large paved lot with several kiosks, one of which usually has a supply of free trails maps. From the overlook there is a view of Napeague Bay, Harbor, and Isthmus, as well as Gardiner's Island and the Atlantic Ocean. This parking area gives access to 3,000 acres of state, county, town, and Nature Conservancy properties and a protected network of 40 miles of trails. With a free map in hand this a great place to go to create your own personal adventures. Have fun!

Ken Kindler is a Trails and Open Space Advocate working to help the trails groups and land managers care for our "Natural Island." If you would like to learn more about our trails or help care for them, visit the Hiking Long Island website. www.hike-li.org.

Inspirations by Emily J Weitz

The first time I ever got my nails done, a glorious day on the road to womanhood, I was sitting in the living room when a couple of my older brother's friends walked by. One looked over at me, sitting on the couch, biting my nails as I tend to do when boredom or stress encroaches.

"Oh, Em, stop biting your nails!" Kate said to me, and I, in my shame, hid my 14-year-old hands below my thighs.

"I have an idea," she said, and she tossed her golden locks. "Let's get our nails done!"

I couldn't believe this amazing girl was inviting me to join her on such a journey. Of course, I eagerly complied. We piled into her green jeep and she turned up the radio: Warren G. She was so cool. We cruised into East Hampton and walked up to a since long-gone salon. Kate sat beside me as the woman in front of me grabbed hold of my unkempt hands.

"Have you ever taken care of these cuticles?" she asked me with more than a hint of condescension. I wanted to tell her that I was still a kid, that the only reason I was sitting before her was to try to impress this older girl who so impressed me. There was little else to say but, "What's a cuticle?"

Okay, maybe I was a little behind the times for a girl raised in Jersey. I mean, half the population at the Paramus Park Mall had been using Lee Press-on nails since they were toddlers. But I, in my innocence, had no idea what a cuticle was. Oh, how I wish it had remained so.

Once she pushed back my cuticles and revealed the wide white moons of my fingernails, I became addicted. I started pushing back my cuticles every day. Then I began pushing them back several times a day.

Eventually, I was actually ripping the skin off my fingertips. Since that fateful day eleven years ago, it has been a daily struggle to take care of the delicate skin that surrounds my fingernails.

Taking care of your cuticles is vital because they are a barrier that keeps bacteria from entering your body. Therefore, you should have your own cuticle tools when you hit the salon. If you don't have the nagging problem of picking at your cuticles, you are lucky. But you should still care for them.

The number one problem that plagues cuticles is dryness. When your cuticles start to peel, or you get hangnails, it's a sign that you need to moisturize them. Apply hand cream, lotion, or nail oil to the lower part of the nail, and then massage into the cuticle. This process should be repeated several times a day.

A common misconception (which was held by my first manicurist and led to my eventual cuticle dependence) is that the cuticles need to be cut. In fact, it is almost as bad to trim your cuticles as it is to bite them, for the aforementioned reason that the cuticle is a barrier that protects you from bacteria. However, overgrown cuticles can impede healthy nail growth.

All you really need to care for your cuticles is a cuticle remover and cuticle stick. Cuticle remover is a cream that softens the cuticles. You simply apply the remover around the edge of the nail and wait a minute for the moisture to seep in and soften the cuticle. Then push back the cuticle with your cuticle stick. Hold the stick at an angle, and make sure to push back gradually. Move the stick in tiny circles around the base of the nail to remove dead skin. That way, you never actually have to take scissors to your finger.

I once met a girl who said that the first thing she looks for when she meets a man is his hands. If he doesn't have good hands, she doesn't want anything to do with him. Once again, I slipped my ragged fingertips under my thighs. It is embarrassing to have torn up cuticles! It seems so trivial, but it really is a gateway into your personality. When I am stressed out, my cuticles are torn to shreds. It's disgusting!

Taking care of your nails is not enough. Applying moisturizer to your knuckles is not enough. The cuticles are often overlooked, but they actually play a major role in your appearance. Take care of them. Save yourself, and don't get hooked on destroying them. Getting over such an addiction is an uphill battle.

New Cosmetic Procedures In Long Island

Have you ever wanted to know more about the cosmetic procedures they talk about on Oprah? On Tuesday, March 21st at 7 p.m. Dr. Alexander Covey of East End Laser Care will present a FREE SEMINAR and share the latest secrets of cosmetic surgery with you. Dr. Covey has been providing cosmetic procedures to the people of Long Island since 1988 and has been repeatedly named "One of the Top Doctors in New York" by the Castle Connolly Guide.

At the seminar, Dr. Covey will discuss everything from the latest breakthrough treatment Mesotherapy, a non-surgical technique to melt away fat, cellulite and unwanted inches, and Thermage, the amazing non-surgical skin tightening procedure used to tighten sagging skin on your face, neck, and other parts of your body, such as your arms, legs, abdomen and buttocks, to state-of-the-art Laser Treatments for "lines and wrinkles, acne and acne scarring, brown spots, facial veins, rosacea, and stretch marks."

Learn how exciting new "Filler Facelifts" restore volume and fullness, eliminate facial lines, and even reshape your nose using Botox, Collagen, Restylane, Radiesse and other natural fillers. Find out how Laser Hair Removal can permanently reduce unwanted hair. He will also tell you about Glo™ Minerals, the advanced mineral makeup used by celebrities such as Geena Davis, Holly Hunter, and Jane Seymour, and the official makeup of the 75th Annual Academy Awards now available in our offices.

You will meet patients who have had remarkable results and find out how cosmetic treatments can help you look better and feel better. In short, this is your chance to find out more about what's new in the world of cosmetic procedures.

All seminar attendees will receive FREE Gifts and Special Discounts. There will also be drawings for FREE Cosmetic Treatments, a FREE Glo™ Minerals makeup application and a FREE Vacation for 2.

Call (631) 878-9200 NOW to register. PRE-REGISTRATION IS NECESSARY. (Last time many people had to be turned away). This seminar will take place at The Inn at East Wind at 5720 Route 25A in Wading River and will begin at 7 p.m. Refreshments will be served.

We are asking for a donation of non-perishable food which will be contributed to the Family Service League which has been helping underprivileged children and families on Long Island since 1926.

Get Off Your Butt and Do Something About It

All right, let's be adult about this. Yes, colonoscopies are not exactly number one on people's list of fun things to do. The procedure conjures up terrible images. Many find it embarrassing and awkward. Hell, it probably falls somewhere between catheters and the dentist, but, like the other two, the procedure is a necessary evil (or blessing) for healthy living.

Colorectal cancer has surpassed both prostate and breast cancer to make it the number two killing cancer in men and women (yes, women get it too – equally, for that matter), and is second only to lung cancer. Between January 2006 and January 2007 it is predicted that it will claim 55,170 lives. Even more shocking is that 90% of these deaths could have been prevented. That's 49,653 people.

There's a general rule when it comes to preventing colon and rectal cancer, "The earlier the better." At the age of 50 (45 in African Americans) men and women should commence testing. When the word "testing" comes up in conversation, people automatically assume that the procedure is a colonoscopy, but there's more (and less) to it. Firstly, there is the annual Fecal Occult Blood Test (FOBT), a totally non-intrusive test. It checks if there is blood in your stool, a symptom that there are polyps in the colon.

After the FOBT, there are the five to ten year

Katie Couric helps to publicize colon cancer awareness

tests. Either have a sigmoidoscopy (used for the lower part of the colon) every five years or a colonoscopy (used for the whole colon) or double contrast barium enema (lower GI) every five to ten years. Any or all of these should be accompanied by a digital rectal exam. These are the dreaded procedures which prevent most people from making sure they are polyp or cancer free.

With the sigmoidoscope, the doctor examines the colon and can take biopsies of any polyps that may be present. This allows for the diagnosis of benign or malignant growths in the colon. If a more thorough procedure is required the doctor may suggest a colonoscopy and polypectomy to remove the polyps. It is more or less the same process as the sigmoidoscopy. The barium enema is slightly different. Barium and either water or air are injected into your colon and an X-ray is taken. Because the barium is a metal, it shows up on the X-ray as a detailed image of the colon, on either X-ray films or a television screen. The image would outline any places where polyps or abnormalities may exist.

Okay, we're through the difficult part. Was it so bad? You won't have to think about it for another five years. Now it's up to you to notice the symptoms. While some of these symptoms can be misconstrued for basic indigestion, diarrhea, and hemorrhoids (seemingly non-life threatening), the combination of them over a prolonged time (more than two weeks) can be an indication that something larger and more dangerous may be going on. If you

iHate Pod

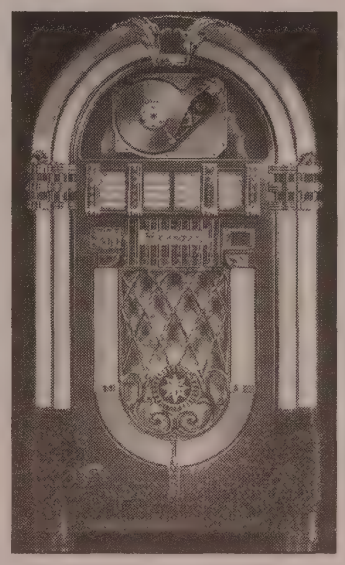
Somehow in the last couple of years, the Apple iPod has grabbed onto the hearts and minds of the sheep of the world and will not let go. Recently its menacing grip has become looser due to the iPod Shuffle and the Nano, but it continues to be imbedded in our feeble, commercially absorbed brains. Gosh, the iPod is so fantastic that even Bono, U2's front man and living saint, has created his own special black and red version, preloaded with his band's cutting edge music. The mp3 player is so important that purchasers can get it engraved with their specialized orders. Bono's iPod comes with autographs from all four band members engraved on the mirrored back. You can write whatever you want. Well, unless you try "10,000 Stolen Tunes Inside," "Cocaine and razor blade not included," or "Rip, Mix, & Burn Down RIAA Headquarters." Apple, according to Methodshop.com, rejected these requests.

The iPod is a silly trend punctuated by annoying advertising and an absurdly high pricetag. Fine, mp3s are the future of music, but the iPod is twice as expensive as many comparable machines. Does anyone really need 40,000 songs?

In a perfect world, people might consider some musical options. An iPod can plug into your car, but I have come up with a sensible alternative to spending $300 on the unit as well as the extra cash for the car charger and cord to plug it in to your car stereo – try using your car stereo. These devices usually come built into your car. They often play compact discs and their price is included in the $20k you've already shelled out for your Honda. It's just a thought.

People are now plugging their iPods into speakers at home. The iPod has replaced the home stereo with docking stations and other devices to stretch it beyond the over-inflated Walkman that it is. In direct opposition to this new trend, people ought to turn back to the roots of music in the home. Record players don't just need to be for DJs and old folks. There's something excellent about the crackle of vinyl that can't be replicated, and, believe it or not, there are still hundreds of turntables available new.

The iPod is so small and white and boring. Maybe one should consider an old-fashioned jukebox for his or her living room. It's a turntable inside a big machine, with lots of pretty, flashing lights. The jukebox can transport us to that favorite bar or diner and it looks way awesome. At least try a jukebox that plays compact discs. Visualize the pathetic little rectangle sitting foolishly in its little chair with speakers attached. Now picture the glory of the juke. Exactly. There is no comparison. If you need to save space, buy a BOSE wave radio. They have killer sound and they're not iPods. There is also something called a "home stereo" that plays CDs and tapes. You might already have one. Consider the fact that it probably works and that you don't need to replace it.



Moving on, there are others that also seethe with hatred for the iPod. SmashmyiPod.com hosted a fundraiser in which they purchase one to be smashed in the Apple store. It was a success and is on view in two videos. It is also believed by some that iPods have micro-technology within them that Apple, in conjunction with the FBI, uses to monitor people all over the world. Some believe they are brainwashing machines with subliminal messages imbedded in the music. Maybe aliens live inside them as pronounced by Anti-iPod.co.uk, the truest haters of the white menace. What we do know is that there is no reason to buy this trendy mp3 player that seems to be spreading like avian flu at a Perdue factory. Please don't fall into the conspiracy. Buy big headphones, boom boxes, jukeboxes, stereos, 8-tracks, record players, or short wave radios. There is an interesting and fun and nostalgic world of musical devices out there that is being homogenized into one universal, white rectangle. Don't let anyone tell you how great they are or about all the nifty attachments and things an iPod has and does. Don't read anything in this paper that says any differently. They may try to undermine my message, but the nanotechnology has already reached them. They are iPod owners and they are against us.

The Garden At Rock Cottage by Lance Brilliantine

A Unique Flower to Start Now

On a recent trip to Mexico, I stayed at the lovely Hacienda Vista Hermosa in Tequesquitengo, just south of Cuernavaca, in the State of Morelos. The hacienda was the former estate of Hernan Cortes, the Spanish conquistador, and was constructed in the early 1500s. What a lovely environment; with its original stone walls, catacombs, rolling fields of sugar cane and flowers, magnificent vistas, and lake!

On a horseback riding expedition there, I rode through vast fields of tuberoses, like miniature agave plants with lovely, white flower spikes. The fragrance produced by the flowers, which are similar to gardenias, was intoxicating and almost overpowering. How magnificent I thought these flowers were! So, I decided to learn more about the plant to see if they might be included in the garden at Rock Cottage.

Apparently, the Tuberose, Polianthes tuberosa, is a tender, tuberous perennial that is native to Mexico. It is in the Agavaceae family of plants, related both to the agaves and to lilies. Its cultivation dates back to pre-Colombian people including the Aztecs, who used the wonderful, fragrant plant oil to flavor chocolate. Today, tuberose is primarily used as an ingredient in perfumes and in the cut-flower market. The flower is reported to have both mythical and magical powers, e.g., its nectar is said to possess special, sense-heightening powers, and the scent is said to transport all who inhale its fragrance (no understatement here!).

The plant produces a radiant grouping of strap-like, grassy leaves of 14-18 inches tall. Flower spikes are 32-36 inches tall and may contain up to 30 fragrant flowers per spike. There may be multiple spikes per plant. The flowers are either single or double depending on the variety. The research suggests single-flower plants produce more vigorously than double-flowered plants. The plant is not hardy on the East End, so must be treated as other tender plants (dahlia, gladiolus, etc.). The plants can be over-wintered in the ground in Zones 8 or higher.

Interestingly, the mountainous, Mexico landscape can be quite cool at night. Tuberoses survive temperatures as low as mid-40-degree F, though they do best in temperatures between 60F–85F. This means that tuberoses can be used successfully in East End gardens if treated like a non-hardy plant.

The plant can be a great addition to landscape borders, where its leaves provide textural contrast, and with other traditional plants such as iris, peony, dahlia, and cannas. Because of the textural appeal, the plant is a great selection for inter-planting among other plants or using in single groupings as specimens. It can also be used successfully in container gardening.

If used as a bedding plant, the rhizomes should be planted in spring after the threat of frost has passed, and removed for over-wintering before the first fall frost. The tuberous rhizomes do best when planted in full sun in sandy, well-drained soil that contains a little organic matter. The ideal pH is between six and seven. Soil should be kept moist, but not excessively so, as the tubers will rot from excessive moisture. Be sure to locate the plants where visitors can enjoy the wonderful fragrance of the flowers.

When planting tuberoses in the garden cover with about two to three inches of growing medium. A monthly feeding with an 8-8-8 fertilizer increases the flower size and performance. If started earlier indoors, set in pots that have good drainage. Plant at about three inches from the top of the soil.

When grown outdoors, the plant blooms in three to four months. The bloom time can be shortened to about two months if the plants are started indoors in a sunny window or in a greenhouse in March. Tuberoses can be successfully transplanted outdoors to the garden in mid-May. This means the plants should not be introduced to the garden until the overnight temperatures are consistently above 55 degrees F. The Mexican single-flowering varieties seem to perform better than the double-flowering varieties.

A second flowering occurs approximately two months after the first, so if the plants are started in March indoors, two blooms will occur during the East End growing season. The second flowering usually produces more, but shorter flower stalks – each with fewer flowers. Flowers last for about 25 days. The flowers may be white, beige, or pinkish depending on the variety. All flowers have a waxy cast about them.

This will be a first year for tuberoses at Rock Cottage. I believe it will be well worth the effort to grow these wonderful plants!

Real Estates by Diane Strecker

As East End realtors gear up for a new season, the market opens without much change in regard to pricing. The frenzied atmosphere of last summer's bidding wars and inflated sales prices has calmed considerably. However, values, for the most part, are still much the same. And, it still being early March, the excitement of the summer season is yet to come as high-profile buyers return. Recently, Kelsey Grammar and wife Camille, who have been looking at homes here for the past year, settled on a property in Bridgehampton. The couple sued a few years ago when construction chaos from the renovation next door disrupted their costly summer vacation.

Sales here have slowed but, as many brokers have pointed out recently, the winter is always a slower time. The pace of the past few years was quite exaggerated compared to that of the norm and will be a tough act to follow in the future as pricing begins to level off. The value of East End properties has tripled, at least, in just a three-year period, making a fairly modest home in the Hamptons priced at about $1.5 million.

This same home might have been priced at $500,000 just a few years ago. Today, a million and a half buys a fairly typical 4-bedroom, 3-bath, traditional shingle-style about 3000 or so sq ft in a new subdivision in Bridgehampton, parts of Southampton or Sagaponack. These are by no means considered luxury homes but ordinary single-family residences. Most of these developments are built on what were once old farms and are accessible to, but not necessarily nearby or on, the water. That would bring the property into an entirely different category.

Ditch Plains, Montauk

Unless, of course you travel to the North side of the South Fork to areas like North Sea, where, although still part of Southampton, one can get a little more bang for the buck. A new waterside development project there called Cove Landing offers new, 4-bedroom, 4-bath homes on 1-acre lots starting at $1.5 million. The 3000 to 4000 sq ft homes are all on bayside lots that offer bay and harbor views. Each will also have an in-ground heated pool.

The area has increased in popularity over this past year for that very reason. Even celebrities such as Paul McCartney have found their way to the less exposed peace and anonymity of these very unpretentious northern Hamptons hamlets. And in other secluded areas, such as Montauk, there has been talk of Jimmy Buffett bidding on one of the not-so-trashy trailers that range between $400,000 to $500,000 that sit right upon the ocean in Montauk Shores, better known as "The Trailer Park," at Ditch Plains. Buffet already owns a home in North Haven.

This past week in New London, Connecticut, a broker brought me on a tour of waterfront open houses. Prices in New London could never match those of the Hamptons, though possibly Westport or Greenwich, Connecticut could be considered comparable, but not here. I did, however, get a take on how unfathomable Hamptons prices seem to realtors from areas like New London. They are almost in disbelief that we sell tear-downs or old summer cottages for just under a million whereas they can still find a fairly substantial home, maybe even on the waterfront, in that very price range.

Broker Harriet Cohen, of Prudential in New London, says although inventory is beginning to build just as it is here, all in all, she had a strong year. She showed me a few sales that had recently taken place in her area where that million and a half buys you waterfront in the outlying shorefront areas of New London.

One recent one consists of approximately 3000 sq ft, with 3 bedrooms and 3 baths, a two-car garage and fireplace. As you round the bend on the waterfront road toward the quaintness and privacy of Essex, the prices rise considerably. As always, it is all relative when it comes to real estate values and the old adage, location, location, location, still stands true.

have the following symptoms, please contact your doctor: blood in the stool, changes in bowel habits, constant tiredness, constipation, diarrhea, frequent gas pains, narrower than usual stool, rectal bleeding, stomach discomfort (on a regular basis), weight loss for no reason, and vomiting.

Now that diagnosis has been covered, what about prevention, right? How can you avoid polyps and colorectal cancer? Well, there are a couple of theories about how to help prevent them. Fiber has long been associated with a healthy colon and while it (fruits, vegetables, grains, and nuts) is good for you, there is no conclusive proof that it does, in fact, help prevent colon cancer. This isn't to say you should stop eating these things; after all, they have other tremendous health benefits. Tests have shown that exercise and staying thin may help reduce the development of colorectal polyps, but the truth is that there is really no magic bean that prevents this form of cancer. The only surefire way to be positive you don't develop this disease is through thorough testing.

By the time you finish this article, you could very well have been half way through your sigmoidoscopy. It's about time people get over the embarrassment of the procedure, and get on living their lives. Colorectal cancer is so preventable that, in today's medical world, you should be more embarrassed that you didn't go for an exam.

March is Colorectal Cancer awareness month, so maybe it's about time you did something that may just save your life. Visit www.preventcancer.org/colorectal/ to gain more information, then visit your doctor.

OH DEAR, DEER
Dear Dan,

If you are seeing three deer together it is probably because of the "ecological sink" they are in. All animals (except perhaps humans) need a certain amount of space to live in. When they get too crowded, as they are now, that's called an "ecological sink."

What happens then? Two things: they start eating their young, and they turn gay.

What you are seeing is gay deer. (They are vegetarians, so they can't eat their young.) Threesomes. More important, these deer – gay or not – are developing new social habits. Used to be when you discovered a couple they'd bound away. Now they just stand there in your garden and stare you down. Mike Bottini says he's seen deer at the edge of a road stop and look both ways before crossing.

They are learning to live with us and know they've got the edge: they are so cute! In a couple of years, when they learn to turn door knobs, and invade your house and devour your houseplants maybe "cute" won't be enough to save them.

See Peconic.org/audubon.htm for the real story on deer and the prodigious damage they do to our ecology.

Best.

NOT SO SCARY MUNSTER
Dear Dan,

Just for your edification: Al Lewis actually was Alexander Meister. I had the pleasure of being introduced to him in New York City by his brother, Philip Meister, founder of the National Shakespeare Company and Conservatory, where I studied acting many years ago. They seemed quite connected and Philip was quite proud of his brother, although he never told me Al's age!

Here's Philip's obituary from the NY Times, which mentions Al as well:

Philip Meister, Helped Start Cubiculo Theater
NEW YORK TIMES: April 5, 1982

Philip Meister, theatrical director and producer and co-founder of the National Shakespeare Company and the Cubiculo, died after a coronary arrest Saturday in Lenox Hill Hospital. He was 55 years old and lived in Manhattan.

With his wife, Elaine Sulka, the actress, Mr. Meister established the Shakespearean troupe in 1962; he was artistic director. The company tours colleges with Shakespearean and classical productions. In 1969, the couple set up the Cubiculo as an Off Off Broadway experimental playhouse that also provided a site for experimental choreography and dance works. Mr. Meister's Off Broadway directing credits included Louis Lippa's "The Breaking Wall," "Happy Ending" and "Day of Absence" by Douglas Turner Ward.

Mr. Meister also created the National Shakespeare Company Conservatory to train actors. Besides his wife, he is survived by a daughter, Deidre Sulka-Meister, and two brothers, Henry Meister and Al Lewis. There will be a gathering of friends at the Cubiculo, 414 West 51st Street, next Monday at 8 p.m.

Thought you might be interested in knowing.

BRAINS AND HEART
Dear Dan,

My wife was given a copy of the article by a friend. The reason it is of such interest is that I too have an Einstein connection.

In 1953 my father, William Frauenglass, was called before the House Committee. He refused to testify. Since he was a teacher in New York City he would lose his job. Dad wrote to Einstein for support and Einstein answered. His letter was front page NY Times. Dad and Dr. Einstein did correspond from that time until Dr. Einstein's death in 1955.

I have those letters and notes on a visit that my family paid to Dr. Einstein in Princeton.

Just thought you might be interested in another connection to the great man here on Long Island.

BREATHE DEEPLY
Dear Dan,
Hi David,

I am not sure if you remember me. I took yoga at Gurney's Inn & Resort in Montauk a few months ago with you and your friend Tom.

I just wanted to tell you how my friends and I thought your article on Winter Dating was hilarious. You should have a follow up on the topic...

Debbie
Via e-mail

Way to go, David. –DR

A WORD BY ANY OTHER NAME
Dear Dan,

Re: Gramm

Please tell Christian McLean and your proofreaders that in the article about Pollock that to say "more importantly" is incorrect – an adjective ("important") is called for – not an adverb ("importantly").

Not to worry – this is perhaps the most common misusage of English, except "They gave it to him and I"), which Dan gets wrong occasionally.

Howard Purcell

P.S. We just want you to be perfect.

Him and who? –DR

Police Blotter

Stolen Barbies

A resident in Quogue reported to police that somebody stole approximately $5,400 worth of sports memorabilia and collectible dolls from his garage. Among some of the items taken were the first version of Barbie, a collectible Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtle, a baseball signed by Bucky @#$^@$!@ Dent and three extremely valuable pet rocks.

That's A Lot Of Jewelry

A woman in Hampton Bays called police to report that somebody had stolen $350,000 worth of jewelry from beneath her mattress. The woman also reported to police that she was assaulted by a man who was described as her domestic partner. Police haven't heard of that large a theft from a home since 1990, when Hewey, Dewey and Louie reported that somebody stole $500,000 worth of gold coins from their billionaire Uncle Scrooge McDuck's corporate headquarters/vault known as "The Money Bin" where he has been known to literally swim in his money.

That's A Lot Of Viagra

An employee of a Hampton Bays pharmacy reported to police that man had brought in a prescription that had been altered. The pharmacist refused to fill the prescription, saying that nobody in their right mind would need that much Viagra. Or would they?

Stolen Door

A man in Bridgehampton reported to police that someone had stolen a custom-made mahogany door from his home, worth approximately $3,000. The man is relieved that the perps did not steal from inside the home, considering the fact that his dish set alone is worth $18,000.

Knicker Knocker

A woman in Sag Harbor called police after somebody knocked on her door and then ran away when she went to answer it. Police told the woman that it was most likely a small group of kids playing a prank. It is either that or an organized, systematic, psychological torture technique designed to drive the woman crazy, drive her out of the house, where it will then be invaded by killer, flesh eating bees that will destroy her entire life.

Stolen Register

Somebody stole a cash register from a Sag Harbor gas station. The owner of the gas station was relieved when he found out they took the register that has keys that always stick. The owner also reported that not very much money was in the register, "Business is slow. I'm considering lowering my price of gas."

Ran Out Of Gas

A not-to-bright crook stole a car from Sag Harbor and ran out of gas while driving along County Road 39 in Southampton. Police found the vehicle on the side of the road and immediately arrested the man who was inside of the vehicle, trying to restart it. When police questioned why the man hadn't stopped to get more fuel, he said, "I thought that the 'E' stood for extra gas."

Not The Trash Man

A woman in Wainscott reported to police that a man that she did not know was in her garage. The man then told the woman he was there to pick up the trash, and he then proceeded to exit the garage and leave in a green Fork pickup truck. The woman is suspicious of the incident, considering that the man did not take out any of her trash. Fortunately, she didn't give him any spending cash. If police do catch the man, they are going to make him scrub her kitchen floor. If he refuses, they will not let him rock n' roll no more. One officer was then quoted saying, "Yakkity yak, don't talk back."

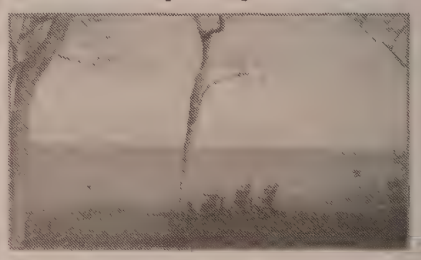
Is This the Year You Finally Buy Waterfront?



On a clear day from this spectacular Orient sound front location, you can see the lighthouses at the mouth of the Connecticut River. Step out of your seaside outdoor shower after a morning run on the beach and enjoy lunch on the bluestone terrace, or head to your water view studio to work on that novel. You won't be disturbed in this exclusive, quiet community of artistic Manhattan professionals. At the end of the day, stretch out in a bluff-top Adirondack chair and watch as sun sinks into the sea, cocktail in hand. Chic, designer Hamptons-style cottage boasts chef's kitchen for entertaining (or not), cherry floors, fireplace, two bedrooms, one-and-a-half tile baths, permit for sound-view Gunite pool in the works and lovely, privet-hedged landscaping. Shy acre and a quarter presents almost limitless possibilities for expansion, and you won't need a variance to build that 6,000 square foot dream house, if that's your thing. If not, enjoy the simple life as is. Pristine, turn-key condition. Welcome home, you've earned it.

EQUAL HOUSING OPPORTUNITY

Lower Mortgage Payments by 45%

With Sophisticated Jumbo Loan Program

NY - Mortgages for multi million dollar homes is typically limited to 50% financing, carries a higher rate and requires full income verification.

A scarcely known loan is available for home purchases and refinances that offers up to 90% financing, cuts monthly payments by as much as 45% and requires no income verification. Additionally there are enhanced tax and pre-payment advantages with increased cash flow not available with other mortgages.

Many wonder why they haven't been informed about this unique loan. One reason is this loan does not profit lenders in the same way other loans do so they're not easy to find. The company sponsoring these programs, North Atlantic Mortgage Corp., has made a Free report "Sophisticated Jumbo Financing" available. This report also addresses many other unique types of mortgages, credit issues, and most importantly how to get a great Jumbo loan with no income or asset verification.

If you are self-employed, professional or high-income individual, there are many other savvy "secrets" and various loan options that you probably aren't aware that exist.

Simply call 1-877-794-5363 to request this informative free report.
